BRAZIL'S TALENT

6 6It is a sin to compare places when travelling", they teach us at tourism school.

True, but hard to avoid such a natural behavior. When I try hot-dogs anywhere in the world, I compare them to New York, Chicago or Vienna style. When I visit a palace, Versailles comes to mind as a reference point to bounce stats off: "This palace has 200 rooms!" "Well, Versailles has 300, so take that! I can't help it. No one can. Sometimes I do manage to avoid comparisons and enjoy the place, thing, food or whatever for what it is, making my experience less frustrating and more appreciative, but that is rare, or whenever I have nothing to compare it with.

So, to contradict this golden rule, for the sake of making a point, Γ Il put the idea of Brazil as a tourist destination on a comparative basis with other places in the world:

Brazil does not have the most pristine beaches (Tahiti does), the most flavorful dishes (France, Italy and Thailand do), historic landmarks (Rome, Beijing and Athens), Art museums (Berlin and NYC own this), bargain outlet malls (Florida), cutting edge architecture (Shanghai).

So why Rio?

What Brazil does very well, and I go as far as to say "better than anyone" is parties.

Brazilian festivals, whether cultural feasts or large parties, are second to none. If we follow the formula to making a great party that says "the more the merrier", Brazil can easily put 2 million people at any event, with less than a week's notice. Take the millennium celebration: 5 million on Copa beach. Any carnival in Rio or Salvador, in the recent years, has topped 6 million party goers on the streets, all 6 days. Rock in Rio, 2 million PAYING customers during one week.

The attitude of the party-goers can make or break a party, so "fun-loving" is the adjective attributed to most Brazilians. It will be rare to see a group of Brazilians behaving like diplomats at the Vienna Royal Ball. They'll be the first to take off their tuxedos and take over the band, teaching them how to play a little samba.

Brazilian festivities have funds too. The carnival parade in Rio costs US$30 million for 2 days of show. 60 thousand dancers and every one dressed beautifully.

Brazil has music, an essential ingredient to any party. It has lots of it, in 32 distinct styles.

Event organizing is a big and profitable business in Brazil and the festival agenda doesn't stop at carnival and New Year's Eve. The same care and attention is given to the Parintins festival, in the Amazon, or Bumba-meuboi festival in the North-east of Brazil. Then there is Festa Junina in June, all over Brazil, Oktober fest in the south, the Barretos country-rodeo in Sao Paulo. Like a Rolling Stone, a Brazilian's social life catches no moss.

So, we have large numbers of fun participants, money, reasons to party and a well-balanced calendar. The last ingredient, and probably most important, is the fire in the heart. A desire to celebrate life, the here and now, the proximity of others. Whether or not this fire burns on alcohol or passion is neither here nor there. What matters is that Brazilians want to party. Where there is a wish, there is a way. And that desire to constantly celebrate something, anything, is what inspires Brazilian culture, and makes Brazil stand out as the most festive culture in the world

Brazil is for partiers.

R io is split into 4 zones: the South Zone, the North Zone, the West Zone and the Downtown area (Centro). As far as general tourism is concerned, the only zone of interest is the South and the Downtown area.

North Zone

The North Zone is mostly poor neighborhoods, with very little appeal for tourists. With the exception of the Tijuca Forest, Maracana and the Salgueiro samba school rehearsals, no other visits are necessary.

West Zone

The West Zone includes L everything after Barra da Tijuca (commonly referred to as Barra). Barra is a new middleupper class neighborhood with tons of shopping areas and nightlife. It is, however, mostly modelled on the average American suburb, with large avenues, strip malls and ample parking. Unless you have never seen an American suburb in your life, we recommend limiting your visits here to Pepe Beach, Nuth dance club, Joatinga beach and Barra Shopping mall.

BARRA

São Conrado

CITY OF RIO AT A GLANCE

Downtown

From a tourist's point of view, the Downtown area is a zone of interest due to its historic and cultural buildings (museums, churches, colonial architecture etc.) Although very active during the day, the downtown area (with the exception of Lapa and a few happy hours), is shady at night.

South Zone

The South Zone is the richer and prettier part of the city, with dozens of hills and mountains, the lagoon (Lagoa) and marvelous beaches. It is also safer than other areas, but care must be taken in the slums covering its hills. It is in the south zone where most of your day tours and nightlife will take place, so this is the area where we most recommend staying.

10 Rio Commandments

1 Do stay in Zona Sul

Trust us on this: most of your day and nightlife will revolve around the neighborhood of Ipanema. Try to stay as close to it as possible.

2. Don't walk around WITH JEWELRY

Ladies and Gentlemen! This is not your turf, so no matter how much clout you have at home, it is not worth shit here. Necklaces, rings, expensive watches, bracelets etc. are not to be worn except when you are off to a swanky event or club. Otherwise, keep it down low.

3 Don't argue with COPS

The cops here are instructed to take action, as opposed to discussing who is right. It doesn't actually matter who is right, who stole what from whom, or if you didn't know she was under 18. If they want to arrest you for anything, let them, then call your consulate. If they want to fine you for something you did, usually for a driving offense, (a good reason not to drive), then it is up to your slickness to implore them not to give you a ticket.

4 Get change for a 50

The surest way to end up in hell is to walk around with a R$50

note thinking that the beer guy, bus or taxi will have change. Whenever at a restaurant, shop or bar, pay with the R$50. Five R$10 bills can be worth more than one R$50.

5 Don't try to do CULTURAL STUFF IN BARRA

Even though Barra is a nice neighborhood it is, in summary, a taste of American life. We do, however, recommend Pepe beach and Nuth dance club

6 Don't stay far away BECAUSE IT IS CHEAPER

Okay, you have a Brazilian connection you met back home or on the Internet. He is the one who begged you to come, and vou did. After arriving, vou realize he lives in bumble fuck. What to do? Stay at his place and please him rather than enjoy the practicality of staying in Ipanema, as this guide suggests? Or should you tell him that you want to explore Rio by yourself during the day (while he works or goes to school) and that you two can hook up at night? Go for the second option. You will waste time and moolah on cabs traveling to and from his place.

7 Don't try to drive

Don't rent a car and try to figure out Brazilian road signs. Ok, believe this: not even Cariocas (people from Rio) know how to get around this maze-like city.

So unless you've got a very good reason, don't try to drive around. One wrong turn and you can end up in the slums, being fined by the cops, or stuck in rush hour traffic. Even if it seems more economical, stick to taxis

8 Don't try the peppers

I beg you! Your stomach is not used to the chemistry in Brazilian peppers. Even if you can handle them, your intestines are bound to react in an explosive way for days after, ruining your trip.

9 Avoid the Hills.

Most of Rio's slums are on the hills, so with the exception of Santa Teresa, Cosme Velho and Joatinga, hillsides should be avoided for your own safety. Only go on trails with a tour guide (see page 74).

10 Don't assume the WEATHER WILL STAY NICE

The weather in Rio, as in most tropical cities, can change drastically within an hour. If it's sunny, don't waste your time doing indoor tours like museums or shopping.

Lodging Options

THE AREAS

If you are here more for the nightlife and beach, stay in Ipanema. If you are here for traditional Adaytime tourism, go with Copacabana, which is closer to most of the attractions and offers "Yes-now-I'm-on-vacation" ocean views. If you can't find anything affordable there, opt for Botafogo, Flamengo or Gloria, which are all excellent options, despite being 20 minutes from Ipanema beach. Santa Teresa is the ideal option for those looking for a boutique hotel or bed & breakfast with a mountain view and quaint streets.

HOTELS

Most of Rio's hotels were built in the 70s and many have not been remodeled since. If you want 5 stars with a unique design, consider the Fasano, Santa Teresa or the Copacabana Palace. For a traditional deluxe hotel, consider the Sofitel, Marriott, Pestana, Caesar Park, Marina or Atlantica. The Sheraton Rio almost feels like a resort, as it has its own beach and tennis courts. If you want a 3 or 4 star hotel, they vary very little in accommodation style (same beds, same tv, same shower etc). So choose according to location. Go at your own risk to those lower than 3 stars.

www.booking.com has become the leader in best prices

Hostels

There are over 80 hostels in Rio... with varying quality levels. Do your reseach. Alternatively, consider hostels that have a B&B built in, as some have private rooms for 2, at reasonable rates. www.hostelworld.com

APARTMENTS

The best option, if you are coming with a group, is to rent an apartment. Most have doormen, maid service (US$50 for a day's cleaning and laundry), TV, DVD etc. Some may even have beach gear, like bodyboards, surfboards or bikes. Prices range from US$120 for a one-bedroom to US$500 for a beach view, 4 bedroom penthouse.

www.craigslist.com has better prices, but www.airbnb.com offers greater security in the rental process

Couchsurfing

Young, by yourself and staying only a few days? Consider the couchsurfing style of lodging, where you crash in someone's extra room or living room, for FREE! You just have to become a member, and tons of cariocas will be happy to have you around. What's their motivation? Maybe they want to practise their English, maybe they want some company, maybe they feel like having an apartment they can crash across the globe.

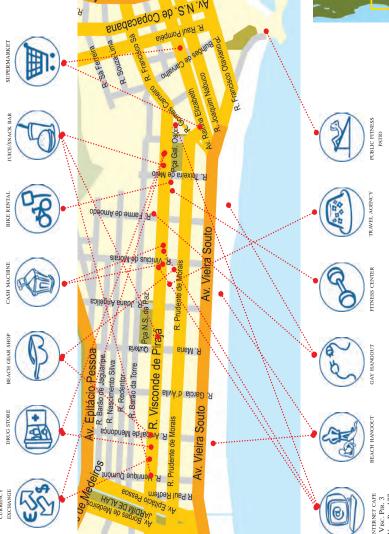

www.couchsurfing.com

BEFORE COMING

Stuff Near Ipanema

The commercial zone is along Visconde de Piraja Street. The "young" beach spot is within a block's radius of the #9 lifeguard station (Posto 9). Ipanema is extremely safe, day and night.

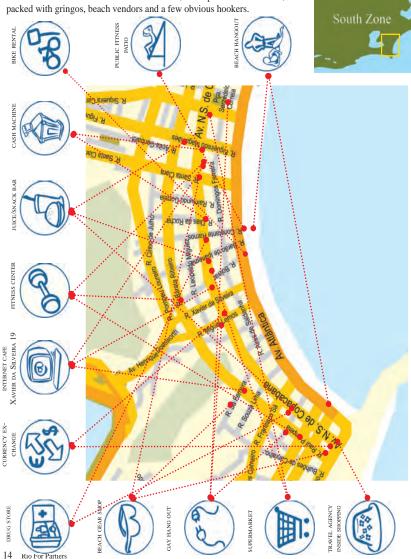

Rio

Centro

Stuff Near Copa South

This side of Copacabana is privileged by being close to Ipanema. It has two busy streets, N.S. Copacabana and Barata Ribeiro, where most shops can be found. The beach is the third best in Zona Sul, after Ipanema and Leblon, packed with gringos, beach vendors and a few obvious hookers.

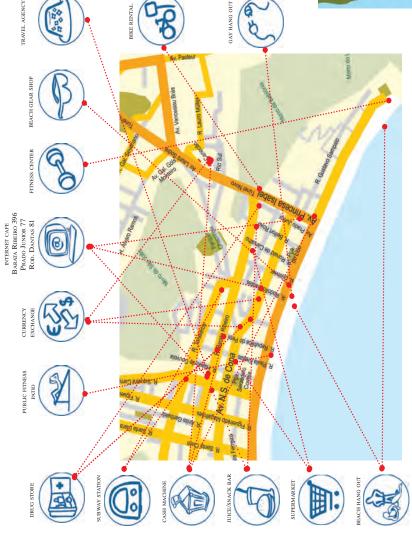

BEFORE COMING

Stuff Near Copa North

Copacabana North is a good option if you want to stay close to downtown and the main tourist attractions. It is just as busy during the day, but quieter than the south part of Copa at night. It is also a little more dangerous at night, so cab back and forth for any distance further than a few blocks.

WHAT TO BRING

SUMMER CLOTHES

It is constantly hot and humid during the summer months, when you may not even want to wear a pair of pants, let alone a sweater at night. Ladies stick to shorts, skirts, summer dresses, tank tops (vests) and T-shirts. Men stick to sandals, Bermuda shorts and T-shirts

WINTER CLOTHES

Winter (June to August) in Rio feels like mid-May in the northern part of the US and Europe, or like the beginning of April in the southern part of the US and Europe. Dress accordingly. During a cold night in mid winter, temperatures drop to 60F, 15C

EQUIPMENT

Sunglasses Cheap watch Digital camera (the smallest

Disposable camera (for street events)

Anti-diarrhea medication Sunscreen and after-sun

Cap

possible)

Travel-socket adapter

GSM MOBILE PHONE

A GSM ready cellular phone will help you stay connected with the world by using the roaming service from Brazilian carriers. If your phone has a builtin camera, even better: take and send pictures and videos to make all your friends instantly jealous. (To learn how to activate your phone in Brazil, see page 28)

BUDGET AND MONEY

Cheap spending (eating at the hostel, few restaurants, no hardcore clubbing, basic tours): US$75 a day.

Average spending (restaurants and street food, hostel or cheap hotel, most of the tours): US$130 a day

All-out good living (nice hotel, restaurants, all the tours, clubbing, shopping, massages etc): US$250 a day

You should bring half of your budget in cash and have the other half available on your credit card

PETTY CASH

If you are in a group, instead of each person paying for his or her beer, taxi, entrance and other small stuff, why not choose someone to carry the petty cash. Each morning, each member chips in R$50 or R$100.

IDs and Cards

Passport

Student ID

Driver's License

Tourist Visa

2 Credit Cards (Visa & Mastercard) Call your card company and let them know you'll be travelling to South America, as they sometimes freeze your card on seeing irregular activity, till you call in to explain.

WHAT YOU DON'T NEED TO BRING

Towel or swimming gear (you'll look silly, buy it in Rio instead)

Snorkel or Hawaiian shirts

Winter iacket

Laptop

Black socks

BEFORE FLYING TO Brazil

FACTS

- 1 Brazil has 20% of the world's fresh water supply (China has 20% of the world's people!)
- There are 192 million. Brazilians running around.
- 3. They all speak Portuguese, not Spanish or Brazilian!
- 4. You cannot tell Brazilians simply by looking at them (they have the most diverse mix of races and cultures in the world)
- 5 Two thirds of them live near the coast (or should we say "By the beach!")
- 6. Caipirinha is possibly the best drink in the world to sip at sunset
- 7. Every year Brazil hosts the two biggest parties in the world: Carnival and New Years Eve!
- 8. They produce over 50% of the world's coffee!
- 9. Iguassu Falls, in the southern state of Paraná, is bigger than both Niagara and Victoria Falls! (60 feet higher than Niagara

Quotes

Fifteen reasons why
Brazilians are proud to be
"Brazilian":

(Real quotes from real Brazilians on Ipanema beach!)

- 1. "Because of the unique energy of the Brazilian people."
- 2. "Brazil is a happy and passionate nation."
- 3. "We have a lot of natural resources and natural beauty in the world."
- 4. "We are always optimistic!"
- 5. "Because of all the beautiful women!"
- 6. "We are very hospitable, spiritual and sensual."
- 7. "We are very open and fun."
- 8. "Because of the solidarity here. We are very hospitable, communicative and our people have a wonderful temperament."
- 9. "We have the best football team in the world."
- 10. "We live well and enjoy the natural beauty that God has given us."
- 11. "We have incredible cultural diversity which gives us strength and a feeling of togetherness."

Brazilians are what race?

Brazilians are a mixture of different ethnic groups. In fact, so mixed for so long that you commonly get 16 shades of white to black to Indian to Asian. Sociologists consider this mixture a meta-race, since a true genetic melting pot is still at work.

Happiness

Prazilians are the happiest people in the world, according to two independent sociological studies from US and German universities. After analyzing various factors such as emotional balance, financial stability, nutrition, health, family, love, sex, stress and professional outlook, Brazil came out on top of both international studies, with Nigeria in 2nd place.

They concluded that the happiest countries were the ones where its citizens' perception of and hope for life improvement are high. Dealing a blow to political theories, 2 Scandinavian countries came out close to the bottom

GENERAL

Guest Tips

by Antonio Pedro Figueira de Mello

REAL GABINETE Português de Leitura

The Royal Portuguese Reading Room is one of the most beautiful places I know. It is ideal to spend a morning there.

BIRA'S BAR AT BARRA DE GUARATIBA

To have a passionfruit caipirinha and to taste the different pasteis (fried wontons) while admiring the breathtaking view from Marambaia plant reef is, without a doubt, one of the best options in Rio.

OUVIDOR AND MERCADO STREET CORNER

On Friday afternoons, you can't go wrong joining the Cariocas for their happy hour at this revitalized street junction, next to the Centro Cultural Banco do Brasil and the Casa Franca-Brasil. When the evening starts, the bars offer free live top-notch samba. Cheap and unmissable.

"GLOBO" BRAND AIR-BISCUITS AND MATE

TEA ON TAP

You can't leave Rio without trying this perfect duo on a sunny day. When at the beach and you start feeling hungry or thirsty, try the Globo air-biscuits accompanied by a cup of Mate tea straight from the vendor with the barrel. Be sure to ask him to mix both tea and lemonade flavors "misturado". It's always cold, refreshing and goes great together with the biscuits.

JARDIM BOTÂNICO

Jobi

In the wee hours, your best bet is a beer at Jobi, the last bar to close in town. While absorbing Rio's life style, have a chopp (draft beer) and bolinho de bacalhau (cod cake).

MARACANÃ

You can't miss Maracana on a Sunday... it's obligatory!

Antonio Pedro Figueira de Mello is president of Riotur, the city's tourism office.

Tours

3 THINGS TO ASK BEFORE

BOOKING A TOUR

What happens in case of rain? Postponed or carried out anyway?

How long does it take to pick up others on the tour?

Is it possible to find transportation back if I break away from the group?

Will there be food vendors and restaurants involved or should I pack some snacks?

Don'ts

Don't get irate with Brazilians who show up half an hour late... that's within reason in Rio. Its called Brazilian time. Salvador time is even worse!

Don't ride in the front seats of buses or vans...they drive too fast.

Don't forget to double check any info you get on the street. Brazilians are always glad to help, even with wrong info.

Rio By Yourself

Want to meet others to make the most of your visit? Use these tricks and team up.

1) Join a group tour

- Soccer game
- Schooner tour
- Favela tour
- Hiking

2) ASK A TRAVEL AGENT

Whoever booked your hotel, apt or flight can introduce you to others who are in Rio by themselves, so you can make some vacation buddies.

3) HIT THE HAPPY HOURS EARLY

Why not, right? Should make you more extrovert by the time people arrive.

4) Ask your concierge

They should know who else is staying at your hotel that shares common interests or wants to split a tour, like renting a speed boat, private city tour etc.

5) Join a small NIGHTLIFE TOUR

Ask before about the group dynamics.

How to cure a hangover

A nasty hangover can ruin the following day. Follow these tips and you'll be back at the bar by 2pm.

- 1) Before going to bed drunk, drink as much water as possible.
- 2) Take Aleve, Tylenol or any powerful aspirin in the morning.
- 3)
 Drink some coconut water the next morning.
 2 coconuts if you are short, 3 if your nickname is Shrek.
- 4) A beef pastel (fried wonton) or a picanha burger (rumpsteak) with fries is just what the doctor ordered.
- 5) Jog and sweat it away. What better place to do it than the beach bike path (for joggers too).

To avoid hangovers

- 1) Don't drink caipirinhas made on the street... they tend to use unfiltered ice.
- 2) Pace your drinking with a glass of water every so often. (Γ ve never been able to remember to do this, but hypothetically it makes sense.)
- 3) Before going back to the hotel, throw down a steak sandwich from Lamas or Cervantes (check page 130). I have no idea if this works, but it sure tastes good.
- 4) Ask for premium cachaça mineira or vodka when ordering your caipirinha. The cheap brands are not as filtered or selectively distilled.
- 5) A shot of olive oil before drinking will help you win any binging competition...really!
- 6) Cut yourself off after 17 caipirinhas... I mean, you gotta have limits, man!

Emergencies

A visit to Rio is no trip to Disney World. It is a big city, with its fair share of problems. Should you get into an emergency situation, be sure to follow these procedures to get things back to normal.

ILL OR INJURED

Although Rio has some free medical assistance offered by the state, most 1st world visitors may not like the response time Brazilians have become accustomed to. Long waiting lines and lack of English speaking attendants may worsen vour medical problem.

Luckily there is a clinic devoted to working with tourists

24 hours a day and in several languages (English, Spanish and French).

They have the necessary infrastructure or partnerships with other clinics to cure what ails you, from simple colds to minor surgery.

Should you need to, they can also visit you at your hotel. What's more, they work with most international health plans and traveler's insurance.

STOMACH ACHE

You ate the peppers, right? Or was it the street caipirinhas with the questionable ice? We bad mouth it so much, people get curious about them...oh well. What my buddy, who was travelling through India, used to do whenever he got the runs would be to mix a finger of vinegar with a finger of water and gulp it down. That would kill whatever was wreaking havoc in his stomach. He would later drink some yogurt to replace his intestinal flora. Soon he would drink a few coconut waters (agua de coco) to rehydrate. Has worked for him and others, but naturally this is something I can't recommend because I'm not a doctor...iust a trick I heard.

RIP OFFS

Should you get tricked by any establishment in Rio, whether a tampered taxi, a restaurant waiter or a bait & switch shop, contact me. The only things that boil my blood are poor customer service and paying for dumb movies. I live for this and will try to use all my godlike-powers to put them in their place.

cris@rioforpartiers.com

Always remember to keep the Emergency Contacts Card (see back cover flap) in your pocket.

Robbed

First say your prayers if you weren't physically assaulted or attacked. Second, hop over to the Tourist Police Station in Leblon (Av. Afranio de Melo 159 or tel: 3399-7170). They may not be able to recoup your belongings, but can issue a police report for insurance purposes and issue an alert to patrol cars to better serve that area.

Arrested

Were you a bad boy (or girl)? Or were you set up by "the man"? In either case, nothing like a slick lawyer to squeeze you out of trouble. To find the best one for your needs, contact your consulate (listed in the back cover).

LOST PASSPORT

Should you lose your passport (it shouldn't have left the hotel in the first place), be sure to contact your consulate, as they can produce a quick fix. Check the back cover for a list of local consulates and numbers

Missed Flight

Overslept? Unless you are here during high season, you may be able to extend your stay for US$75 or so. Check the list at the back for the local offices of the major airlines.

Travel Health Tips

Insurance

The most common recommendation I hear from doctors that deal with foreign patients is that everyone travelling should have traveller's health insurance. This foresight helps you get attended at hospitals that may come up with excuses as to why they don't want to treat someone who is "promising" they will pay later.

YOUR PILLS

Take your special medication in sufficient quantities for slightly more than the length of your stay, should you get stranded in Rio due to a volcano in Europe or whatnot. Your medication may not exist here, or may have stricter control. If it is very strict or controversial medication, get your doctor's prescription translated to Portuguese, to avoid getting stuck in customs or by the police.

Make sure the medication has your name on it and bring it with your carry-on luggage.

EATING

Take it slow: even though it may all look beautiful and well made, different cultures have slightly different water, oils, climate and seasonings. When all these change at the same time, your body may not know how to adapt in time.

Seafood is great, but only go for it when you feel confident about its quality and freshness. When in doubt, ask to visit the kitchen (Brazilian law gives all customers this right).

COMMON MEDICINES

- Headache (Dor de cabeça) -Aspirin (aspirina)
- Hangover (Ressaca, Mal estar) Hangover pill (Engov)
- Fever (Febre) Paracetamol (Paracetamol)
- Nausea (Enjôo) Dramamine (Dramin)
- Pain (Dor) Dypirone (Dipirona) or Paracetamol
- Diarrhea (Diarréia) Floratil (Floratil) Imodium (Imosec)
- Cut (corte) Band-Aid (Band-Aid)
- Sprain (Contusão) Ice (Gelo)
- Bruises (Hematomas) Heat pack / cold pack (Compressa água quente/ Compressa água fria
- Vitamin C effervecent tablets (Cebion)

TIPS:

Wash your hands regularly.

Only drink bottled water.

Go easy on seasonings and street fried foods.

When it looks sketchy, stay away from fruit and vegetables and of course, mayo and cream. Beware of vegetables if the town you are visiting is far from farm areas, like it's in the middle of a dense forest, desert or savannah.

During intense street festivals, opt for manufactured foods and drinks, as the street food might be as old as the festival and the sellers' storage procedures for such high demand may be too lax.

In situations where the food quality looks doubtful, like interstate bus-stations, opt for snacks from major brands like Nestle, Kraft and others. A safer bet may also be cakes, breads and the like, that don't involve meat.

VACCINES

Recommended for Brazil: hepatitis A and B, Tifoid, Yellow Fever, Rabies, Tetnus, Mumps.

Yellow fever is obligatory in Amazonas, Mato Grosso, Mato Grosso do Sul, Amapá, Pará, Roraima, Rondônia, Acre e Goiás.

Carry your health plan card with you at all times. After being treated keep the records and receipts for your refund process.

SAFETY TIPS

As a general rule, gringos are somewhat untouchable by drug-lord rules. Your chances of being kidnapped, held hostage, etc are a lot smaller than that of an upper class Brazilian. The small fish, such as young pickpockets and out-of-town criminals, take their chances.

Beware on empty streets just as much as at overly crowded events. The new trend in pick pocketing (some new Eastern-European techniques are now arriving in Brazil) is to create a situation in a crowd where your hands are distracted while they go for your pockets.

A good example is the Russian mustard trick, where they put mustard on your head in the subways. While you check to see what the heck is on your head, they go through your pockets.

Another common trick here in Brazil is the "fight breaks out" trick, when right in front of you there is a scuffle in the middle of a crowd. While everyone is being pushed away from the scuffle and while you are holding someone who is being pushed onto you, someone behind you (sometimes a woman) goes through your pockets.

Don't be a hero: if you are held at gun point, slowly pass over the money and leave it at that. Get the hell out after any dangerous situation: if you manage to stop a pickpocket in his tracks, get out, as his partners may come after you.

Another very common technique is for the crook to rob you while on a bike. They can snatch your cellular phone, necklace or purse while passing by at high speeds.

If you are passing a shady character on an empty street at night, wave an eager "Hi! I'm over here!" to your imaginary friend who's a block away. This should throw a monkey wrench in his scheme at the last second.

Don't trust the cops' intelligence or integrity: if you get pickpocketed, say "what the hell" and go on with your tour instead of getting caught up in reporting incidents and other red tape. Not only is that an exercise in futility, but it will eat up your time and mood. Like a friend of mine said after getting $200 pick-pocketed in the north of Brazil, "F*ck it! I consider it a small tourist tax" and went back to drinking. Not the best point of view as a long-term philosophy, but it worked fine for that week.

How to avoid being a target

As a general rule, you want to dress down. The grungy look will do you good. Since you are on vacation, you don't need to worry about your reputation. Here are some general rules to abide by to better guarantee your safety:

BASEBALL CAPS

Dead give-away.

HAIR CUT

Leave the "bed-head" hair style for the trendier clubs.

ACCENT

When in a crowd of dubious types, keep your talking to a minimum.

SHIRT

T-shirt instead of a Hawaiian shirt, also leave the Brazilian soccer team shirt for when you get back home.

Money & Ids

Don't bring too much or too little money, as they will shake you down till they get something. Don't carry a passport, nor all your credit cards or more than R$200. Bring one major CC and one form of ID: student or state ID or driver's license. Don't trust your pockets, keep them zipped or buttoned up.

CAMERA

Don't walk around thinking the strap will guarantee your camera's safety.

BERMUDAS SHORTS AND FLOOD PANTS

You can wear bermuda shorts, but wear the styles the Brazilian boys wear, not what's in style back home. Flood pants never caught on in Rio, so forget it.

SANDALS

Wear tennis shoes or flip-flops instead. And, Lord, no black socks!

THINGS YOU'LL

GETTING ACCESS ON YOUR SMARTPHONE

You can now get a pre-paid SIM chip from TIM telecom, called Inifinity-Pre. or Claro Prepago Ilimitado, to browse the web and get mails on your smartphone.

What's even better is the price for internet usage on these prepaid chips: 50 centavos per day! That's right, you can browse, email and even Skype all you want for 50 cents. Imagine how your trip will improve!

To get a pre-paid chip, and if you have the help of a Brazilian or a concierge at your hotel, you can simply go to consumer eletronics chain stores like Casas Bahia or Loias

Americanas and buy the chip, R$10, together with R$18 worth of credit, asking the sales person for "credito, por favor". Then install in your unlocked smart phone. Call any number and you will be transfered to a TIM or Claro customer service. After you get to a live customer rep, say "Do you speak English?". You'll be transferred to the English speaking department who will register you after getting some basic passport info. In a few minutes your phone should be working.

THE PRICEY ALTERNATIVE: ROAMING

Your GSM mobile works in Brazil. It roams calls using local carriers, so you can send text messages, pictures and videos, access the internet and, of course, make and receive calls.

To make calls in Rio, use the following dialing process:

- Making local calls: simply dial the number
- Calls within Brazil: 0 + long distance carrier code + city code + phone number
- Calls outside Brazil: 00 + international long distance carrier code + country code + phone number

If you don't know the codes for long distance carriers, simply let your phone choose one from its automatic programming. To save money, it's best to check with your phone's carriers for partnerships with Brazilian carriers

Your contacts back home can reach you simply by dialing vour regular number, with no prefixes.

Brazilian money

At the airport, only change US$50, enough to pay for the cab to your hotel. Once there you'll be able to exchange at fairer rates

WHAT TO DO

READ THIS BOOK

During your first day at the beach, while you wait for a butt to pass by, read this book! It will guarantee you a great time and lots of savings.

Frescobol

The paddle ball game the Cariocas play is one of the few non-competitive sports in the world. Stand 15ft (5m.) apart, close to the water and paddle away.

BODY SURF

Body surfing is probably the purest water sport in the world. That means you can have fun with nature without any equipment, or even swimming trunks. As a wave breaks, jump with it, do two strokes so your body catches up to the speed of the wave and ride the wake.

BEER

Hey! Now we're talking! Beer drinking at the beach is everybody's favorite sport. But do drink some water every now and then, as you are probably dehydrating faster than you think, which will make you sleepy by dusk.

Jog

Feel like exercising or sweating off yesterday's hangover? Jog along the beach. No further explanation needed...

BODYWATCH

Inevitable.

WALK Duh...

Volleyball

Yes, you want to play volleyball, but the Cariocas playing it won't even notice that you are waiting to be asked in. You can either be persistent and ask someone if you can join, or you can rent or borrow a ball from someone and play on an empty court (unlikely to happen on weekends). If you can hang with the best or if you are tall, they may let you in. If you suck, practise elsewhere.

AT THE BEACH

Soccer - Football

In most cases, since the teams run from 4 to as many as 16 players on each side, you can just ask any one of the team players if you can join their game. This is if you can hang. If you can't, go back to paddle ball.

Massage

You can get a beach massage with any of the masseurs posted every 6 blocks close to the sidewalk. Their prices range from R$60 to R$100 an hour.

Don'ts

DON'T TRY THE

PRE-COOKED BEACH SHRIMP

Or any beach seafood. Certain death.

Don't make eye contact with the vendors

If you do, they will come and pester you for several minutes. When they catch your attention, quickly, give them the "no" sign by shaking you index finger just twice.

GUYS: DON'T LIE DOWN ON THE SAND

That's for women or guys accompanied by their girlfriends.

Don't forget to take off your sunglasses

Raccoon eyes are not cool in Rio.

Don't leave your stuff UNGUARDED

When going into the water, simply ask your beach neighbor to watch your stuff for you. If you brought a digital camera or any amount of money, one of your group should stay behind.

Water safety tips

Whenever a fierce wave is coming your way, you should swim towards it so you can jump through it before it breaks on top of you.

If it does break in front of you, drop to the bottom, stay as close to the sand as possible and wait for it to pass over you.

If you get caught in the undertow (or any water current pulling you out to sea), two simple rules: 1) don't struggle against it; 2) swim parallel to the beach till you are out of the current.

If there are more than a few surfers in the ocean, try to stay as far away from them as possible. One slip and their board could crack your head open (sorry about the visual).

If you can't swim you should stay close to the lifeguard posts; in case you need to get pulled out.

Fashion Crimes in Rio

BLACK SOCKS WITH BERMUDAS AND SANDALS

You are not in France.

SAFARI HAT

BACKPACK AT THE BEACH

What the heck have you got in there that is so important? Black socks? Go to the beach with your beach clothes and that's it. It's the beach experience, not an expedition.

Large waterbottle

There are juice stands and bars on every corner...do you really prefer your warm water over a freshly blended iced mango juice?

BEAN NECKLACES ON MEN

That's so 90s... and not yet retro. Wait 7 years.

Brazilian flag canga (SARONG)

Yup, muggers love it when you wear those, cause they can rob you, then indirectly sell the sarong back to you, how's that for irony?

THE LATEST ITALIAN FASHION

It hasn't caught on yet in Brazil, so it will just make you look scandalous.

Rio is not Club Med... put on shoes like everyone else, specially if you are going to restaurants or clubs

TOWELS AT THE BEACH

MOTEL FLIP-FLOPS IN PUBLIC

Brazilian soccer team SHIRT

GETTING AROUND

tting around Rio is easy: Jiust get in a cab! 1 out of every 3 cars is a taxi (or so it seems). What's more: it's cheap. You can go from downtown to Ipanema for about R$30 (US$17). From Ipanema to Barra for about the same. The meters have 2 rates (bandeiras): "1" for daytime (6am to 9pm) and "2" for nighttime, weekends, holidays and the month of December. The "2" bandeira charges 20% more than the "1", so check. Just remember to ask the taxi driver if he knows how to get to where you want to go before you step in "voce sabe chegar no " pronounced "vosay sa-bee shay-gar no [insert place here]...". If he doesn't know, hand him your hotel card or take the next cab

CAR RENTALS

Driving a rented car has become easier with the advent of the GPS. It does become helpful if you are planning on visiting the Off-Zona Sul attractions (see page 54), or if you plan on visiting Buzios, Petropolis or Paraty (cars are not allowed on Ilha Grande) (see page 170).

Subway

Check the Rio Big Map attached to the back of this book.

Buses

The other, less recommended, transportation method are the public buses. Although a lot cheaper, these take longer (up to 55 minutes from downtown to Ipanema, where a cab would take 20 minutes).

Enter thru the front, pay inside for each route. There are no daypasses.

Frescão

A safe and comfortable option if you are going to or from the downtown area is to take the "Frescão", an air conditioned passenger bus that serves the business commuters.

They go for R$9 and run more frequently during rush hours.

CHAUFFEUR SERVICE

The classy option is always a chauffeur service, available outside most 5 star hotels. Although their rates start at R$100 an hour, some chauffeur services are also accredited tour guides, making them an excellent alternative to guided group tours.

WHAT'S THE DEAL WITH?

EVERYTHING BEING SO GODDAMN PRICEY?

The dollar and euro are weak and the Brazilian Real is strong. Most of the world's wealthy are parking their money in Brazil, expecting the high interest rate local banks offer, while being somewhat unware of the real rate of inflation. So, large influx multiplied by the difference in currency strength and you get a standard chesseburger costing US$20, just about everywhere. What's worse is that apartment prices having skyrocketed to Manhattan prices, to a point where US$500k won't buy you anything decent in Zona Sul and. US$2500 won't rent you a 3 bedroom apt in Ipanema.

BEACH VENDORS?

Just like the street vendors, the beach vendors tend to offer more practical stuff like snacks, ice cream, beer or sunglasses. Forget the hammock guy.

FLANELINHAS?

These are guys that watch your car for a few R$. You pay them R$2 and they don't kick your rear view mirror off; fair and square. Each one owns a block and is responsible for whatever happens to your car. Since that is where they will permanently work for a few years, should something go missing, you can find them the next day and open a can of whoop-ass.

RUNNING STOPLIGHTS AT AFTER MIDNIGHT?

For safety reasons, most people slow down at red lights, check for traffic, then speed up again, as stopping at a red light in the dark can be dangerous, due to car robbery.

STREET VENDORS EVERYWHERE?

Selling mostly stuff made in China, street vendors account for about 1/3 of Brazil's work force. This type of business is illegal but frequently overlooked, as most escape the regulating street cops.

Dog TV?

These are rotisserie chicken ovens, referred to as television for dogs. For around R$18 you can get diced chicken to go.

Poor people in rich areas?

They come to nicer neighborhoods to beg from the rich (makes sense), but donation is not recommended unless they have an obvious condition. Many of them are in a condition to work but choose to beg. Don't give them anything, as this doesn't help anybody. If you want to help, check page 76 on how to give back.

RECKLESS DRIVING?

Since most Brazilians bought their license, or forgot most of the rules and regulations, everyone drives like its Super Nintendo.

LACK OF TRIBES?

Where are the punks? The nerds? The hippies? The heroin addicts? The emos? The rastas? Rio doesn't have visible factions of any of the above. It is mostly preppies, jiu-jitsu fighters (pit bulls), artsy-fartsy (neo-hippies) and normal people. You can find more tribes in São Paulo.

SHANTY TOWNS ON THE HILLS EVERYWHERE?

Why do the poor have the views, while the rich are locked down to the flat areas? A law from when Brazil was still a colony is still in use, prohibits anyone from building on the hillsides, allowing Cariocas to have a green view from wherever they live. In the last 40 years, the hills have been overtaken by the poor however, and the government has had little luck in stopping them.

THOSE MINI

"Washington memorial monuments" in the middle of the side walk.

Those are placed by the city to prevent pig-parkers from parking on the sidewalk.

EXCESSIVE WAITERS?

Given that the minimum wage is R$670 (US$320 per month), most businesses can afford a large staff to improve service. Unfortunately, most of this staff is under-trained, which lowers the quality.

HOT WOMEN BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD?

These tall, hot prostitutes are state-of-the-art transvestites or transsexuals. Don't fall in love

EXPLOSIONS AND SCREAMS ON WEDNESDAY AND SUNDAY NIGHTS?

Don't worry! Those are soccer fans rooting for their teams... more like roostering for the teams...

THE LACK OF LUXURY CARS?

Brazilians get hit with 120% tariff on imported cars, so a BMW325e goes for about US$80K.

WHAT'S THE DEAL WITH CONSUMING BEER ANYWHERE?

I know, isn't it great?

Day Tours

Here is the digested version:

If you want to try a little of everything, this is what we recommend:

Day 1: Sit on Ipanema beach all day and unwind.

Day 2: Do a bike tour from Copacabana to Glória, stopping to go up Sugar Loaf.

Day 3: Santa Teresa and Corcovado.

Day 4: Hang-glide or paraglide, followed by a tour of a favela.

Day 5: A cultural tour of downtown, Christ statue at sunset.

Day 6: Eco-tourism hiking tour.

Day 7: Diving in the Cagarras Islands.

Day 8: (or Saturday): Joatinga beach, followed by body boarding lessons at Pepe beach in Barra.

Day 9: (or Sunday): Ipanema beach and hippie-fair. Soccer game at 5pm.

Relax: Ipanema

The first thing anyone arriving in Rio should do is sit on Ipanema beach for at least a few hours. But of course, you can't just "go" to the beach - there is a ritual to follow. Estimated Total Time (T): 8h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$ 130 Best on: Sunny Weekday

BEACH GEAR

First, buy yourself some fashion conscious swimming gear, as Brazilian beach fashion is different from other countries: swimming trunks are wide on the side and bikinis are mediumsmall triangles with horizontal straps.

2 Breakfast

Go for a juice and "pastel" (see page 161) at any of the juice bars on Visconde de Pirajá street

3 IPANEMA BEACH

You can now go to the beach. If you want the hip young spot, look for "Celebridade" tent by the big tall coconut tree between Joana Angelica Street and Maria Quiteria. If you want to eat good food and drink worldrocking caipirinhas, opt for

of the Posto 9 life-guard post. Tell the beach tent vendor you are a Rio For Partiers reader and you would like special treatment.
He will find a chair for you upon request (R$4). Plunk down and let the view sink in.

Mate tea w/ lemonade: A must Ipanema girls

Don't order a beer just yet. Buttwatch instead

You are in one of the world's most blessed cities and you are on vacation. Now you can order a beer. Ask for a beer holder (isopor) as the heat can warm up your beer before you get half way through it.

You can try most of the stuff the beach vendors have to offer, with the exception of the shrimp, which tends to go bad under the sun.

If you want to try something different, go to the "Uruguai" beach tent. He makes probably the best chicken sandwiches in Rio, using his own "chimi-churi" sauce. Don't add the peppers though.

After the beach, wash off the sand at the lifeguard station and head over to Benkei (sushi), Garota de Ipanema (steak

(salads) or Big Nectar (sandwiches) for a late lunch.

WINDOW SHOP VISCONDE

Check out the shops along Visconde de Piraja, walking counter-traffic till sundown. Cut through to the beach and hopefully catch the sunset in Ipanema, drink in hand. Head back to the hotel for a late siesta.

Relax: Pão de Açúcar & Boat tour

Flamengo, Botafogo bay and Urca with Sugar Loaf are panoramic areas. Visit Sugar Loaf, followed by a schooner boat tour. Estimated Total Time (T): 8h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$100 Best on: Sunny Weekday

Breakfast

Start off with an acaí and pastel at any juice bar close to where you are staying.

2 Sugar Loaf

Cab to Urca by 11am. Catch a cable car to the two peaks. Take your time: on the first mountain, "Urca", look for a bar called "Abençoado" and buy a bottle of bubbly (R$65). Champagne is never expensive when you have a good reason to open it. Take it to the chaise by the deck and enjoy the height of your trip, soaking it all in.

1 HOUR LONG WALK THRU FLAMENGO PARK

Walk from Urca to Marina da Gloria, along the coast, passing by Botafogo beach, then Flamengo park, arriving at Marina da Gloria, where you'll do a...

4 SUNSET SCHOONER BOAT TRIP

Once you get there, look for the Saveiros Tour agency, which offers 2 hour schooner tours. leaving at 3pm. For roughly R$60, they will take you on a traditional Brazilian sail boat around Guanabara Bay, hopefully catching the sunset.

Relax: Joatinga & Barra Beaches

Joatinga is one of Rio's most charming yet hidden, beaches. It is only visited by locals during weekends, or weekdays in January, when surfers are on school vacation.

Estimated Total Time (T): 7h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$ 120 Best on: Sunny Weekend

BREAKFAST

A suco de mamão (papaya juice) with a kibe (Arabic beef snack) or misto quente (toasted ham & cheese sandwich) at your closest juice bar.

2 Joatinga

Hop into a cab and ask for Joatinga. Although the cab fare may be expensive (Ipanema to Joatinga=R$29), it will make sense once you check out the view from up above.

Walk down the precarious path to the beach. There are one or two beach tents to offer you chairs and drinks. They charge more than others because of the remote location. Shadows are cast early, due to the stone walls around Joatinga, so once that happens (usually around 3pm), get back up and call a taxi from the nearest phone booth, or ask a Brazilian with a cellular phone to dial 2434-0553 and call a cab for you.

3 PEPE BEACH

Take the cab to Praia do Pepe in Barra. Once there, sit on the sand and for the next few hours check out the hard-bodied people around you.

WILD BEACHES

If you also want to visit other famous, distant blue water beaches, like Grumari, Prainha and Guaratiba, we suggest you get a guided tour. Jungle Me offers a hike to deserted beaches, and saves you money on taxis.

Relax: Copacabana

Copacabana still remains a place of Brazilian ethnic, cultural and social diversity. This alone makes it interesting. Est. Total Time (T): 8h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$ 130 Best on: Sunny Weekday

BREAKFAST

Start off with a hearty breakfast (in case you missed yours at your hotel) at Colombo, in the Copacabana Fort, on the extreme right of the beach, where you can absorb the killer view. R$4 to enter to the fort.

Posto 6

Walk to the beach, get a chair and bask in the sun for a few minutes.

3 Walk and People

WATCH

Walk up and down Copacabana's sidewalks and check out the diversity of people.

4 Massage

After your lunch, walk along Copacabana beach looking for a shiatsu massage specialist. They do a great job at a cheap rate (roughly $80 an hour).

5 Late Lunch

Once you get to Atlantica Hotel, head in three blocks and ask for Cervantes.

Sit down at "Galeto Sats" (the grungy restaurant next to Cervantes) and there you will enjoy another
Brazilian

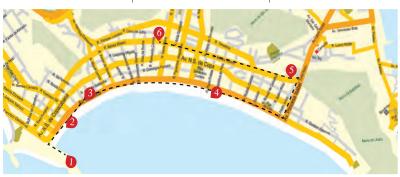

meal: game hen in lemon sauce. Ask for hatata portuguesa (pon fries) batata portuguesa (pan-fries) as a side dish, farofa (manioc flour), pao de alho (garlic bread) and molho-a-campanha (vinaigrette).

6 Sunset

Head over to Arpoador and applaud the sun's final blessing on today.

Relax: Soccer Game

aracanã, formerly the IV world's largest stadium, is officially capable of holding 120,000 people, yet it has seen over 150,000 at some popular soccer finals.

SOCCER GAME

As soon as you get to Rio, ask around to see if there is a game going on and if it will be good: meaning big teams or championship finals. This will be an experience like you've never had.

Breakfast

First you will need a strong breakfast to line your stomach. It shouldn't be beer, as you'll be pounding them in the next 30 minutes.

Tailgating

After the good boys from Brazil Expedition pick you up from your hotel, you'll be taken to outside the stadium where you should get yourself a T-shirt of the team you will be rooting for (Flamengo, Botafogo, Fluminense and Vasco are the better ones from Rio). Try the food from the vendors, even the filet-meow, (meat kebab possibly made from street cats...) The air is charged, as enthusiasm and hope are conjured on both sides.

Maracanã

Once inside, you'll experience Rio at its most religious: 100K+ people independently stopping to wholeheartedly pray for their teams. Moments after "Amen", you'll be playing "Simon Says" for the next two hours: a little guy acting like a maestro sitting all the way down there will be showing 10,000 fans what to do, sing and shout. This is called an "organized fanclub" since that faction of fans all have their chants, stadium-sized flags and sneaked-in fireworks. The most common chants involve the "judge's ass" or "mother". Once a goal is scored everyone has an orgasm and the chants get reenergized. If you see the beer vendor, get 2 at once as they are scarce. After the game, stick together to go home.

Note: Maracanã is undergoing remodelling, and wont be ready before 2014. All games are being played in other stadiums around Rio.

Relax: Christ Statue & Santa Teresa

This is one of those days when you wake up on top of the world: First stop, Corcovado (Christ statue). Estimated Total Time (T): 6h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$ 90 Best on: Clear weekday

1 Breakfast

After breakfast go to your local fruit stand/ grocery store and buy one mango, one caju fruit and one fruta do conde, (we'll explain on page 164).

2 Trem do Corcovado

Get a cab to the Trem do Corcovado, so you can take the train along an eye opening track up to the statue. Rua do Cosme Velho 513, 8:30am to 6:30pm).

The taxi driver will try to tell you he can drive you up to the statue for X reais, but it is not the same as the train experience.

3 CHRIST STATUE

Once up there, check out the view, shoot photos, have a morning beer, hang out for an hour and then head back down.

4 Santa Teresa

Cab to "Largo do Guimarães" in Santa Teresa. There you can walk or catch a bus towards Lapa. This bus runs through St. Teresa, a 19th century neighborhood filled with cute little houses in the traditional Portuguese post-colonial style.

6 Lunch

Get off the bus at Largo do Guimarães (ask somebody) and sit for lunch at any of these places, whichever is open: Sobrenatural, Bar do Mineiro or Espirito Santa. They all carry typical Brazilian dishes at fair prices.

6 LARGO DA CARIOCA

Hop back on the bus and get off at the last stop. Ask around for Largo da Carioca.

There, you will find a mixed bag of Brazilian street life: kiosks selling products infringing on copyright, fire-eaters, circus freaks, etc. After checking out this human zoo, head over to the Church São Francisco da Penitencia, one of Brazil's most beautiful Baroque churches.

HAPPY HOUR

You can then, as a reward, head over to Beco das Sardinhas for a dozen cold ones

Relax: Lagoa & Botanical Gardens

Cycling around Lagoa is a great option when the weather, or your head, is cloudy. Estimated Total Time (T): 5h Estimated Total Cost (C): R$ 60 Best on: Cloudy Weekday

Get breakfast at a juice bar: Acai (see page 164) with a misto-quente.

2 RENT BIKE

Rent a bike for the whole day. Ask your hotel reception for the nearest bike rental, or consider the Samba Bikes (see page 52).

Make sure you rent the lock too, as you will be leaving it locked here and there

3 Cycle around Lagoa

Head over to Lagoa and cycle around it anti-clockwise, stopping at any of the coconut stands for some coconut water.

4 LUNCH

Stop for lunch at the Gavea mall's food court. After lunch, check out the rest of the mall.

5 JARDIM BOTÂNICO

Once three quarters of the way around Lagoa, you should look for signs for Jardim Botanico. Get over there, lock the bike and walk around for an hour.

6DESIGNER STREET

Rio's designer corner, with 4 large stores showcasing dozens of designer creations.

Rua Lopes Quintas, between 87 and 167

Parque Lage

Then bike over to Parque Lage, right next door. Nice. Snoop Dogg's "Beautiful" video was filmed there. Chill at their cafe and soak it all in. Plan out your video clip for your future smashhit single featuring Placido Domingos.

Relax: Helicopter Tour of Rio

Rio brings an avalanche of memories of all the geography lessons you were forced to sit through at school (without, of course, avalanches and glaciers). Est.Total Time: 7min to 1h. Est. Total Cost: R$ 220 to R$875pp

Rio has ice-age-rounded mountains (yep, that's what made them smooth), peninsulas, bars, bays, rivers, lakes, islands, reefs, forests, shanty towns, grid and non-grid neighborhoods, forts, airports, ship yards, industrial districts, cumulous clouds stuck on a mountain and a giant Christ, making sure everyone is well-behaved.

There are several interesting tours that fly over the main attractions, such as Sugar Loaf, Christ statue, Maracana, Lagoa, Tijuca forest, Copa & Ipanema. Helisight

"Do-It-All" 1 Day Tour

You have one day and you want to see it all in a fun way.

Bike Tour

Join a bike touring company like Urban Tours and travel through the touristy spots of the city that line the waterfront (with the exception of the Christ statue), always heading for downtown.

Rio By Blke tours Philip tel: 96871-8933 contact@riobvbike.com

Ride to 2 Leblon beach and along to Ipanema beach. Cut across to Copacabana 3, head towards Leme, then take the tunnel towards Botafogo 4 and head for Urca

For lunch, have a "Picanha Brasileira" (rump steak on a skillet - serves 3 to 4) at Garota da Urca 5. Then take the cable car up to Sugar Loaf 6 and hang out for an hour. Continue your ride along Botafogo, Flamengo and Gloria beach.

Stop at the Modern Art Museum and run around in the museum for 40 minutes. Bike towards downtown, quickly check out the Paço Imperial and kick start the happy hour in Arco do Teles, next to the Paço Imperial.

At 6pm put your bike in the back of a station wagon taxi and return it before the rent-a-bike closes (8pm).

Car Tour

Alternatively, you can hire a taxi (you will need a Brazilian to bargain this part for you) for R$200, or a tour guide, so they can take you to all the touristy spots, where you can step out, look around for 15 minutes, then proceed to the next.

Given that traffic will slow you down during rush hours, this is where we recommend you ask him to take you: Zig-zag all of downtown 1, Mosteiro de São Bento (stop and visit for 15) minutes), Gloria Church 3 (stop and visit for 15 minutes), Santa Teresa 4 (ride along main street) and stop for lunch at Bar do Mineiro (Largo do Guimaraes).

Continue to Dona Marta 5 (stop and appreciate the view for 30 minutes), Lagoa 6 (drive around it) Ipanema (sit on the beach for an hour), Copacabana (walk along the beach), Botafogo (shop in Rio Sul till almost sunset), Pão de Açúcar 9 (go up during sundown), then head over to Lapa for a caipirinha or two at any of the happy hours, then back to hotel or airport.

SAMBA PUBLIC BIKES

Alternatively, consider using the Samba public bikes. You will need to register online and pay with a Brazilian credit card, as well as use a Brazilian mobile number to unlock the bikes from their stations.

Having both, the process is: 1) Phone the call center, and dial the station number followed by the bike number. 2) Unlock the bike and use it as you wish, returning it to any station in Rio, within 1 hour if you don't want to be charged extra. Keep it for over an hour at R$5 per hour.

Hang Gliding & Paragliding

Hang-gliding and paragliding are by far our highest recommendations, as Rio is one of the few tropical cities in the world where you can fly over the city and land on a heach

A tandem flight is an instructional flight, where you can get a taste for the sport without needing any previous experience. On this course, each person gets a personal trainer, grade A equipment and service within an hour.

Regardless of the weather, you should call as soon as you arrive in Rio to ask to be on standby and request for more information about the climate conditions. There are various factors that determine whether you can fly and this analysis is included in the service. Don't book your your flight for the last day of your trip in Rio, if weather conditions don't allow, you may end up losing out on the chance to fly over the Marvelous City.

A ngra dos Reis is a paradise only 2 hours from Rio, with warm sunlight, calm and crystalline waters, virgin Atlantic Forest and indescribable natural beauty. There are many bays, more than 1,000 beaches and around 365 islands. The largest island is called Ilha Grande, the perfect place for a boat trip or diving.

There are 3 ways to go diving: Doing a Dive Day, a Solo Dive or a Dive Weekend.

DIVE DAY

This is ideal for those who have never been scuba diving, or to Ilha Grande. With this option, you learn the basics of diving with a certified instructor, then go underwater for about an hour. This is plenty of time to enjoy your eye-opening experince. Price without transfer: R$270 pp. Includes equipment, instruction, boat pick up from Angra dos Reis. Minimum 2 people.

SOLO DIVING

If you have diving experience, you can rent equipment and choose your own spot to explore.

Price: R$250 includes all the equipment and 2 dives w/ boat rental with sailor. Pick up in Angra dos Reis.
Minimum 2 people.

DIVE WEEKEND

You can also enjoy Ilha Grande by staying the weekend at their island B&B, diving during the morning, exploring the island in the afternoon and hanging with the locals and travelers at night. Price: R$1100 pp, the 2-Dive Day package with 4 dives, while staying 2 nights at a B&B with dinner, transfer from Rio to Ilha Grande (car service and boat). Minimum 2 people.

Surfing

urfing is still the coolest beach sport and just mentioning it impresses ladies anywhere in the world. But learning it is hard, exhausting and takes many days. For the two hours you spend in the water, over 60 minutes are spent swimming on the board, 58 are spent waiting for a wave and the last 2 minutes is the time you spend riding the wave. (Really, Unless you are staying more than a week in Rio, we don't recommend taking the classes as they will take up 2 hours a day and wear you out for the rest of the day. Unless you are in condition, it won't be worth it. Most students are only able to stand on the board on the second day and it takes about 7 lessons before you are doing basic manoevers. However, if you have started taking lessons elsewhere, feel

Tijuca Peaks and Waterfall Hiking

TIJUCA PEAK

This dramatic mountain is a well-known Rio landmark and also an under-explored tourist attraction. Why not try the unique experience of reaching the summit on your own two feet?

Discover the nature and history of the park, its amazing scenery, experience nature and adventure as you hike through peaks and waterfalls with landscapes not featured in classic tours. Understand the history of Brazil and learn all about the coffee farms that used to exist there, in its golden years before reforestation started in XIX century.

The Jungle Me hike is designed for us, the regular people, who workout when guilt mounts up, so the hike is relatively light, picturesque, educational and entertaining. The guide knows how to make a walk in the woods very interesting, going over the history of Brazil and how that pertains to this urban forest (one of the largest in the world). He will drive you up halfway up the Tijuca mountain, to where the hike will start. then you'll hike for 2 hours till you get to the peak. You'll stop for lunch, which you brought in your backpack, then head to the waterfall down below, for a revitalizing shower (bring swimming gear) before heading back home.

Stand-up Paddle

They should call stand-up paddle "stupid paddle", because it is stupid-simple: you stand on the extra wide and long surfboard and paddle out to sea, checking out places you normally can't (boats aren't allowed close to the beach, for swimmers' safety).

The best part is that you can rent a SUP board and oar for R$60 an hour, which is the maximum amount of fun one can have on the board. This is a sport for anyone from 8 to 80 and that several people can do at the same time. You can rent one near Posto 6 in Copacabana (all the way to the right of Copa, when looking out to sea). Our buddies at Eco Clube SUP have granted our readers a R$20 discount!

Beach Tennis

Beach Tennis was probably developed by a team of marketers wired on Redbull: it is a lot like table-tennis, but instead of a table you have a beach that you stand on, and a big paddleball racket that you use to hit a tennis ball over a badminton net. They first considered "Swamp tennis" but soon discarded it as soon as they realized that anything with "Beach" sells better.

What's best is that private lessons are very affordable (R$60 per hour) and one hour is enough to get you going.

Cultural

A 90 SECOND HISTORY OF BRAZIL

For those of you who haven't done your research, here goes:

Brazilian history is closely paralleled with that of the US: It was discovered in 1500 and soon after was colonized by the Portuguese who soon began to extract Brazilwood for it's braze-colored pigment used to make in red dye (hence the name "Brazil").

By 1600 the Portuguese were trying to cultivate the land with slave labor.

The natives wouldn't be enslaved, so most were killed and African slaves were brought to Rio and Bahia to help with the cultivation of new plants, mostly coffee, cotton, tobacco, sugar and cocoa.

In the 1700's a gold rush broke out in Minas Gerais. Most of the gold and precious stones were extracted (under the strict supervision of the Portuguese crown) and sent to Europe for trading.

The locals didn't like the idea of not seeing the profits, so they started plotting independence from Portugal.

The capital of Brazil was moved from Salvador to Rio (not because of the nightlife).

In the middle of the 19th century, the British abolished slavery and forced other emerging economies to do the same, so no one would have a competitive advantage. Brazil followed suit and abolished slavery.

In the meantime, Brazil became a republic after the King of Portugal lost his throne to democracy.

In the 20th century, there was a massive influx of Germans, Italians and Japanese, which helped organize the place a bit.

Brazil was never in any major war, mostly because Brazilians don't really want to live anywhere else in the world.

Luckily, it was never attacked by anyone, except the French and the Dutch, who kept trying to invade, but were repeatedly defeated.

Cultural: Downtown

Although Rio has a lot of history and cultural attractions, we have narrowed down our recommendations to include only the essentials, doable in a 2 day tour of the center. Est. Total Time (T): 5h per day Estimated Total Cost (C): starts at R$ 100 Best on: Cloudy/Rainy Day

As far as museums, churches and historic areas go, our recommendations are to spend a day or two visiting as many of the following as quickly as possible (1 hour visits):

Day 1

Museu de Arte

Moderna

The Modern Art Museum is in itself a work of modern art by one of Brazil's great architects Eduardo Affonso Reidy, also responsible for the Flamengo park project (together with Burle Marx) and the Catedral (Cathedral).

Mosteiro de São Bento

The Monastery of Saint Benedict boasts one of the most elaborate baroque style churches in Latin America, with tons of gold work.

5 Escadaria Selarón

The 80 meter Selaron stairs are composed of tiles from all over the world and a true work of art. Over the past 20 years the Chilean-born creator Selarón painted different cartoons on ceramic tiles, the most famous being the pregnant favela women (see page 72).

O CATEDRAL

The City Cathedral is another one of Reidy's works. Although unattractive from the outside, inside it has very powerful lighting and acoustics.

CULTURAL 71

7 BIBLIOTECA NACIONAL

One of the largest libraries in the world, the National Library stores over 4 million works.

8 TEATRO MUNICIPAL

Inspired by the Paris Opera, with the outside walls inscribed with the names of some of Brazil's most famous artists, the eclectic style Municipal Theatre has recently been restored to its former beauty and shit.

GUIDED TOURS

You can't really "wing" a cultural tour anywhere, and Rio is no different. You visit and see it all, but where's the context, background, significance and anecdotes? We recommend:

Free Walker Tours

www.freewalkertours.com contact@freewalkertours.com Price: Free! You just tip what you think it was worth.

Cultural: Tour of a Favela

One of the most unforgettable tours you will ever take! The tour through a Rio de Janeiro favela shows how many lower class Cariocas happily live in minimal, yet organized conditions. A must for everyone.

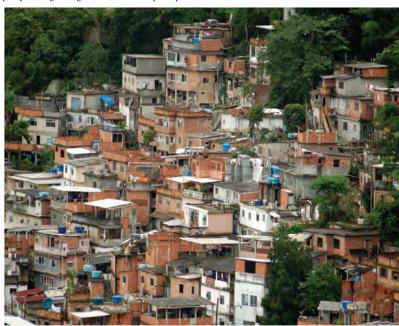

Touring a Favela is obligatory if you want a better understanding of Brazilian society. The tour is very safe and not voyeuristic at all. There are different operators proposing different types of tours in favelas and they are not all the same: some offer a closer and deeper analysis of the social aspects involved.

Most tours introduce you to Rocinha, the biggest favela in Brazil, next to the affluent area of São Conrado. Most are threehour tours, partly walking and partly driving through these two communities. You'll get the chance to visit the commercial area and the handicraft center in Rocinha and the local school in Vila Canoas, as well as taking in some impressive views over the city.

The tour changes the reputation of favelas, all too often related to violence and poverty. Don't worry, you are very welcome there and your presence is important to help them finance local schools. If you want a better understanding of Brazil, don't leave Rio missing this unique experience.

As a great primer, rent "City of God" (Cidade de Deus), and Elite Squad (Tropa de Elite) and the sequel, chilling movies around the control by the drug lords in the favelas in the past. But don't be misled as it has changed drasically: Most favelas have now been pacified by the mayor's new plan to re-integrate them.

Step back in time visiting this boheimiam corner of downtown (Lapa) and it's charming hilltop neighbor (Santa Teresa).

Rio has many facets: rich, poor, jungle, urban and ... quaint. Yes! Santa Teresa is one of the more quaint neighbourhoods in Rio, specially due to its small town feel and the fact that it is on a mountain overlooking the rest of the city.

What's more, it is colonial, so most of the houses still have that century-old charm. A walking tour will do the trick: you'll get a good idea of local history, while riding the bus (the rickety tram is being fixed) and checking out the main attractions.

Silly Pastimes

Down here to party all week with your buddies? Draw a watch on your wrist, pointing the hour hand to a "Skol" marker and leave your real watch at home. Whenever your buddies ask what time it is, it will be "Skol Time" and you all have to chug one.

FOLLOW HOT CHICK

Not stalking, just anthropology... and it's the funniest shit. Hang around Padaria Ipanema on Rua Visconde de Piraja with Rua Joana Angelica during the day, waiting for a foxy woman to pass by. Follow her, staying 10 steps behind. Now watch everyone's reaction as she passes: eyes will open, jaws will drop, cars will stop, drool will splatter and necks will crack out loud, turning to get a complete evaluation.

MIDNIGHT SOCCER GAME IN FLAMENGO PARK

There are freaks playing soccer till 5 in the morning at the soccer fields in Flamengo. And they serve beer and barbecue! The famous "amateur league" games to watch for are the Doorman teams against the Waiters. To get there, ask your taxi driver for "Campo de futebol no Aterro do Flamengo"

BEER UNDER BAT TREE

Into Batman? Who isn`t. If you are nerd-cool, you`re are nerd-cool, you're into bats too. How about a beer under the Bat Tree, in Praça Nossa Senhora da Paz in Ipanema? Walking around the park you'll see bats on a tree like electrons on a proton. They usually don't bite, but that's how the adrenaline kicks in.

Getting Drunk on the Paddle \underline{Boats}

They've got these super-cheesy swan paddle boats on the Lagoa during November to December at night (during the day all year round), but if you bring a bottle of champagne, vodka or wine, the cheesiness will melt away, specially if accompanied by a cigar or what not.

Taxi instruction "Pedalinho da Lagoa, na reta do Corte de Cantagalo".

Afterwards head over to Palaphita Kitsch, the Amazonian kiosk (100 ft away) for exotic caipirinhas.

VISIT SELARON STAIRS

Selaron is already mentioned in the Cultural tour, but his work is so cool it is worth emphasizing. Get to Lapa and ask for "Escadaria Selaron".

GIVING

My Chicago buddy passed a beggar on the street and handed him a R$50 note before I could stop him. When asked why, he replied that he was grateful for what God had given him and wanted to give back.

Unfortunately, the beggars and "injured mothers" sitting in Ipanema are predators of your pity: they pay as much as R$2000 rent to the local mafia to be able to sit outside an international bank and beg. Some women rent babies, give them sleeping pills and beg at the rate of R$120 a day.

So for those of you wanting to give something back to those in need, we have done some research and selected 4 charities that are making a change and setting an example to others in developing world countries.

Most of these are not structured to accept web payments such as Paypal or credit cards, but all have a website with methods of donation. You can also visit them personally, giving you a chance to understand how vour donation will be used. The charity workers will be more than pleased to show you around and any amount is welcome.

ORPHAN KIDS: FAMÍLIA SANTA CLARA

ven though Cicero and Eliete were married and had 3 children it was not enough. They decided to follow their dream and make an effective contribution to society, so they created the "Família Santa Clara"

Today, the family embraces 70 children who are at social risk. Many have been abandoned by their natural parents and many are orphans abandoned by society. The Familia Santa Clara works as a real substitute to traditional institutions and orphanages, offering an invaluable opportunity of a life with a family.

Their mission is to offer a family, education and culture to the children they embrace, preparing them for life, up to the point when they are ready to build their own families and start a life of their own, re-integrated into society.

With over 18 years of dedication and hard work, the Familia Santa Clara has been widely recognized and praised by Unesco, IDB (Inter-american Development Bank) and FIA (Foundation for the Infants and Adolescents of Rio de Janeiro) for it's social importance, giving children an opportunity to be children in a place where love and respect are the primary rules

STREET KIDS: PROJETO UERÊ

Projeto Uerê is a non-profit organization working with children and youth at risk in the streets and in very poor communities in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Children and youth living on the streets can display selfdestructive behavior and are at high risk from diseases like HIV, drug addiction and violence. In Brazil there are at least 23 million youngsters nationwide that live under similar conditions.

The work Uerê offers inside these poor communities is of a preventive nature due to interpersonal and intergroup conflicts. Rio has narcotic dealers that keep the poor population under their "protection", which makes change very difficult and dangerous.

Projeto Uerê contributes by improving the quality of life for some of those children, synthesized within a school providing special education, as well as a daycare center, adapted to the very special needs of the kids it cares for. They work with a specific methodology for each child to care for their particular learning difficulties.

To learn more about how you can help them:

You can Help: Iko Poran

If you want to help in other ways, you can donate sweat instead of money. You can join Iko Poran and become a volunteer, staying a few weeks to a few months in Brazil and putting your back into helping any of the various NGOs associated with them.

The Iko Poran Association has as its purpose the fight against many forms of social exclusion. It coordinates national and international volunteers in various areas, notably ecology, education, health, artistic, cultural and science. They provide social assistance directly or indirectly to infants, teens and to socially excluded communities, caring for the rescue of their citizenship and social reintegration.

Acting as a volunteer you will develop a totally new perspective on the world, whilst committing yourself to a social responsibility that can turn the Earth sustainable for all its inhabitants.

World's Best Chocolate Tasting

Cocoa is a fruit native to Brazil, but ironically, hasn't been explored to its potential, the way European companies such as Lindt, Nestle, Toblerone and others have.

So after 400 years of cocoa exports, Brazil finally has a contender when it comes to high-quality intense dark chocolate: Q Chocolates.

The Aquim family, famous for their gastronomical services around Rio, decided to out-do all the other products in the market and come up with an intense chocolate made purely of the créme-de-la-créme from one of Brazil's most selective cocoa farms.

The result paid off when their entry won Gold at the 2012 Paris blind tasting competition. They sell their chocolates in various forms, the most notable in a jewelry box designed for showcasing their flavours, with a masterpiece chocolate design from none-other than Oscar Niemeyer, the modernist architect. The "QO" box sells for R$1860... BUT... you can taste their entire "Q Collection" sequence, starting at 50% chocolate and finishing at 85%, in a private tasting session in their Ipanema store, while also learning about the process and history of chocolate.

The sequence of chocolates are designed to fire up your heart, pretty much like 3 cans of Redbull together with a coffee and sugar-rush!

THE TASTY IPANEMA

If the weather is lousy, a pub-crawl can be a socio-cultural-gastronomical method of anthropologically observing locals while getting hammered... so... perfecto-mundo!

Of course, you don't want to go it alone or with just one friend, as that can get boring or repetitive. So my idea is for everyone doing a crawl around Ipanema and Leblon to be at the established times and places mentioned here, so you can make new friends and have fresh conversations. Flash this book on your table, so others recognize you. Or you can hire my services, which don't cost anything, just my beer expenses.

Don't have breakfast or lunch before starting. This pub-crawl route is designed to get you to discover Ipanema and Leblon's bars, taste all the popular Brazilian bar foods and snacks and of course, to get tipsy.

An average of 2 beers and 45 minutes per bar is a good pace to keep. Also, before leaving, write your hotel's name and room on a card and keep it in your pocket, in case you end up lost.

PHARMACY

Go to any pharmacy (farmacia) and ask for 4 ENGOVs per person in your group, a hangover deterrent. Take two each.

BRASILEIRINHO AT 1PM

Brasileirinho, on Rua Jangadeiros on Praça General Osorio is the eastern most bar in Ipanema. Order a chopp and some pastel de angu (corn-crust beef pasties).

BELMONTE

Belmonte's winner snack is the pastel de camarão (shrimp fried wonton), which they manage to stuff with 13 shrimps. Their other prized item is the empada de camarão (shrimp cupcake). If you're not into shrimp, ask for carne seca (jerked beef). Their Brahma chopp is top notch.

MANUEL & JOAQUIM

Bolinho de bacalhau (cod cake balls), is their specialty.

SINDICATO DO CHOPP

"Isca de file" (steak strips) is not bad, however it is large.

DEVASSA 3:30PM

Rio's premium micro-brew. First ask for the loira (blonde), then the ruiva (red), then the negra (stout). Repeat if in love. Their porção de pastel (portion of fried wontons) in various flavors is also a gourmet treat.

LEBLON PUB CRAWL

6 GAROTA DE IPANEMA

The chopp is great and their portion of "kibe" stands out from the rest. On completing this, if still tipsy and not drunk, get in a cab and head to your next destination, Leblon.

■ INFORMAL 6PM

The most formal of botequims (Brazilian bars), has great Brahma beer, while their bolinho de aipim com carne moida (beef cassava cake) is scrumptious. A trip to their cold cuts and appetizer table is worth it, as you can choose what you want and pay by the weight.

8 ACADEMIA DA

Cachaça

Linguica acebolada (onion with fried sausage). Seriously consider the caipirinhas here, as they are world-class.

OCHICO & ALAIDE 7PM

Cab to the beginning of Rua Dias Ferreira. Their angle is kick-ass cod-fish cakes, so order 2 bolinho de bacalhau per person.

🔟 Bracarense 9pm

Their Empada de camarão (shrimp cupcake), is amongst Rio's best.

Conversa Fiada

Casquinha de siri (shredded crab in a shell).

D JOBI

Pours one of Rio's top chopp. Also has good finger foods, but carne seca com aipim frito (fried cassava with jerked beef) is a must.

BAR VELOSO 11PM

Another spot worth checking, especially as it is usually packed with hot looking people (but that could be the beer-goggles).

PIZZARIA VEZPA

Rio's end of the night stop for those not getting any. Their extra crunchy New York style pizza is a good substitute.

15 ENGOV AND COCONUT

Engov only works if you take it again at the end of the night, so take two or three and chug a coconut water or two.

By now you should be pretty plastered. So get in a cab and show the driver your hotel card.

THE LEGACY COPA

Toapacabana is an interesting neighbourhood in the sense that it feels like a cross-section of Brazil. It has everything: old, young, rich, poor, church-going and quite the opposite types. It has both quiet corners and the busiest streets in Rio. What better way to soak in the culture than by soaking in some drinks?

All these pub-crawls should start from Arpoador. In Copa's case, you'll be heading towards Leme. This selection of bars and botequins is arranged geographically, but not in any sort of ranking. So reverse, skip or repeat bars and you'll be fine as long as you have a drink in your hand.

ADEGA DO CESARE

Brazilians consider the lager served here "awe-freakingsome" The Caldeirada Aperitivo is the best option to get your stomach started: midsized, award winning seafood stew.

SINDICATO DO CHOPP

Frango a passarinho (fried chicken pieces), if you must eat already.

BAR DO ABOIM

The one thing they do phenomenally: Pastel de carne, (beef fried wontons), for R$2 a pop! Only after 3pm.

4 BIP BIP

Help yourself to a beer from the fridge, no food. Opens after 8pm.

BOTECO DA GARRAFA

Look for beer brands like Teresopolis, Eisenbahn or other Brazilian micro-brews.

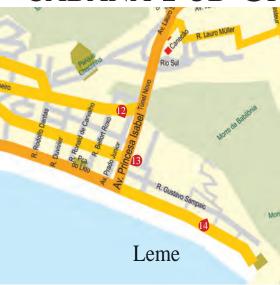

6 Belmonte

Order pastel de camarao, an overly packed shrimp fried wonton and their empada de siri, a filling crab cake! Great Brahma beer too!

DEVASSA

Any of the picanha (rump steak) skillets here rock.

CABANA PUB CRAWL

8 MANUEL E JOAQUIM

Bolinho de bacalhau (cod cake) and a chopp.

9 Adega Perola

An extremely traditional botequim, with rare portuguese bar foods and tapas. You'll notice they are old school, as nothing is sugar-coated: squid and fish ceviche, anti-pasti and other weird preserves... a must visit! Closes early, at 11pm!

REAL CHOPP

A great place to hang out, because of the varied, affordable dishes and busy location. Great chopp.

1 INFORMAL

Check out their counter, as they have a great selection of tapas type food to choose from. Otherwise, their bolinho de aipim (cassava cake) is the best bet. Great escura from Brahma, the stout version.

CERVANTES

The mecca of sandwich bars in Rio! The Sanduíche de file com queijo e abacaxi, (cheesepineapple-steak sandwich) their flagship offering is worth the sheik-shocking R$25. Also consider the lombinho de porco (pork chop), peito de peru (turkey breast) which are also great orders. Be sure to notice how fast they put the sandwich together! It's part of the experience.

ARMAZEN CARIOCA

For a nice place to have the saideira (the last few beers) check out this spot.

La Fiorentina

A nice place to have the expulsadeira (the last of the last beers) for the night.

Caipirinha Crawl

Of course, this pub crawl could be replaced with caipirinhas. One per pub and if you make it past Bracarense, call a coroner.

Cachaças to ask for: Magnifica, Salinas, Ferreira, Meia Lua, Boazinha, Vendaval, Germana.

Fruits to ask for are:

Lime- Limão (regular)

Lemon-Lima

Pineapple - Abacaxi

Strawberry- Morango

Passion Fruit - Maracujá

Lychee- Lichia

Rio has always been the fashion capital of Brazil, but once Carmen Miranda starred in Hollywood movies. the rest of the world started taking notice of tropical themes. She was not only an entertainer, but a fashion designer, designing her own signature headwear, as well as her colorful dresses.

Jump 60 years ahead to the mid 80's and fashion was seen to take a backseat to bodies. The result? Rio overtook California and French beach fashion by designing skimpier swimwear and selling it to a relatively fit and good-looking crowd, grabbing media attention. Soon, brands like Blueman, Zoomp, Lenny, Forum and Bee Brasil took over the market.

Still a decade later, these and other Brazilian designers set the pace for other international brands to follow. The fashion shows in Rio are the crystal ball of worldwide beachwear for the next few years and buyers and designers come from all over to get a glimpse at events like Fashion Rio (www.ffw. com.br) and Rio-a-Porter (www. rioaporter.com.br).

Nowadays, dozens of Brazilian brands have established a solid market on home soil, competing with the international names. while some opening abroad, like Havaianas and Osklen.

Taste Brazilian Music on Grooveshark

Grooveshark.com is a site that lets you stream any song instantly. The difference from other sites being the number of songs available (millions) and the organization by artist, genre, colletions etc.

In this edition of RFP, to help you get a taste for the 8 main types of Brazilian music (technically there are 33 types), we have created playlists on Grooveshark. Go to the main site and search for "crisnog". On the right side, under "People Matches" you'll see the crisnog link, follow it to get to my playlists, organized by brazilian musical genre.

W Bush's Contribution to Culture

The one thing George W.

Bush did to help improve non-US countries is to promote the love for their own culture through a common disapproval for American politics, and hence all things Americana.

Picture this: it is 2003, music piracy is picking up and record studios are sticking to what sells, therefore spewing out commercial crap. Brazilians are cruising on what was produced a few years back, but then, BAM!, the US becomes a political bully, beating up Iraq and Muslims. Anti-americana comes back full force.

What is a person to do? Buy bubblegum music exports, or, hey, blow the dust off those LPs and dig for oldies. Sure enough, within a few months, circa mid 2003, listening to MPB (brazilian music from the 60s and 70s) was triply hip and emotional because: 1) it was/is great music, brilliantly composed and poetic; 2) it's a political statement against all Uncle Sam's culture and 3) it's a retro-sound refreshingly new to young Brazilians. And what's more, a topic for you to reminisce with your parents.

Names like Chico Buarque, Raul Seixas, Jorge Benjor, Tim Maia, Caetano Veloso, Gilberto Gil and others became cool again, specially amongst the 20 somethings. Soon samba and bossa nova, the natural step in retro-digging, were also rediscovered. By 2008, carnival in Rio had once again become the place to be in Brazil, (It had been the place NOT-to-be for the previous dozen years).

Ever since, samba and MPB have been revitalized and are now thriving styles, desired throughout Brazil.

That's my Bush!

Brazilian Funk

Tothing like American funk, Brazilian Funk is the biggest musical revolution that Brazil has seen in the last 35 years. All the others get dwarfed by the advancements in it's empowering ability. Up until this you would have to have a voice, a band, a producer, a label, a marketing plan etc, etc to become famous and heard Now the marginally oppressed, poor and vocally limited all have a chance to make a social commentary on any topic, exposing their new reality. Isn't that what art is about? Showing us what we somehow don't see?

So mix simple electric piano loops with dirty lyrics and what do you get? Wild fire. Girls love dancing to it, guys love singing the naughty lyrics and parents hate it. In other words, just the way teenage music should be.

One of the most famous songs is "The py is mine and I give it to who I want" which became a war-cry for new-age feminists.

Rock

Tf rock lyrics barely make sense in English, then in Portuguese they are just as impenetrable. Given the music industry's woes, talented new artists have not emerged in a while. What the kids have been doing is reviving bands from the 70's, like the Mutantes. Raul Seixas (Brazil's answer to Bob Dylan, but on even more drugs), Secos e Molhados and others, all of whom still have a very fresh sound. (Rumor has it that Kurt Cobain gave a CD of the Mutantes to Beck back in '94 and told him to analyze their style.) For a glimpse of the new talent, start with Pitty, Los Hermanos and Detonautas.

LEAVE RIO DURING NATIONAL HOLIDAYS

When planning your trip, watch out for national holidays, checking to see if they land close to a weekend. If so, be sure to make reservations to check out Buzios, Paraty, Ilha Grande or Petropolis, as Rio's elite flock to these places, making it much more fun than during off-season.

RAVES

Raves come and go in Rio, as government pressure mounts to stop them. Most are held in outdoor areas, country clubs or huge garden complexes. The rave culture hasn't influenced people's fashion style yet, so you may see thousands of people wearing regular clothes. Also, the recreational drugs associated with raves (you know what I'm talking about) are scarce and expensive compared to London and Berlin. New Year's Eve ew Year's Eve is a huge event everywhere, but it is special in Rio: the world's largest gathering usually registering up to 3 million people on Copacabana beach (5 million during the millennium party). Traffic clogs up the city all night long, so don't plan on bar hopping that night. What to wear? All Brazilians celebrate NYE wearing white to ask Yemanja, the sea goddess, for peace. Don't come dressed in anything else as you'll look stupid and if you didn't pack white clothes, buy some. Where should you party? All the clubs offer an "all inclusive special" from R$450 to R$1200 pp. The more you pay, the more you get, the less you pay, the more you wait in line to get a beer. The club parties are fine, but if you make acquaintances with Brazilians, finagle your way into their party, preferably if it's in someone's flat facing Copacabana beach, so you can watch the amazing firework display put on by the city.

What's also cool about the Copa flat parties is that you can party till 11:30pm, walk down to Copa beach to watch the fireworks with the masses, then come back to the party. Since most people woke up early and sat on the beach all day, most will be pooped by 4am, even with Redbull in their veins.

EVENTS 105

Carnival

The world's largest party takes place in Rio, topping 4.7 million people spread over the city for 6 consecutive days.

WHAT IS CARNIVAL?

Carnival is an exuberant celebration of the carnal sins, as its Latin name suggests (carni=meat, val=galore). This originally developed in response to the Catholic church's rule of demanding celibacy for 40 days before Lent. What's the natural thing to do when you know you are going to starve? That's right, to stuff yourself! Carnival started in Florence, Italy and was soon picked up by the Portuguese living in Brazil centuries ago.

The Florentine feasts involved masks to keep party goers' identity and reputation intact. The feather costumes were influenced by the Brazilian natives and the drums by the African slaves. Mix it all up, never stop and you get a 200 year tradition involving an assault on all the senses for the 5 days before Ash Wednesday.

THE SAMBA SCHOOLS

Despite the name, they are not traditional schools, but large membership clubs of musicians, costume designers, dancers and coordinators who spend 11 months of the year planning what show their school is going to put on during the next Samba championship.

They get a theme to work on in April, start developing ideas in May, choose the songs in August and make the costumes in September. They rehearse till the end of January and present their parade in the Sambodromo during the weekend of Carnival, hoping to amaze the 4 judges in each of the 10 categories. The categories involve best lyrics, best drums, best costumes, best floats, best dancing, best melodies etc. Similar to the Oscars.

On Ash Wednesday the voting is tallied and a winner is announced.

The top five schools then perform their parade again in the "champion's parade" the following Saturday. Since the schools have already won, this parade is more casual and nonmembers can buy a costume and join in.

Parading with a samba school during carnival becomes one of life's most unforgettable experiences, so if you can get hold of a costume, by all means take it or buy one if you can afford it

Prices for ground level costumes range from R$500 to R$1200 depending on the school. whereas the float costumes can go for R$5000 and you have to look super-model hot and know how to samba to be considered for possible inclusion. As far as getting an amazing experience for a decent price, the R$500 costumes will do. Once you get the costume, you'll be assigned a sector from that samba school. The 4000 costumed members wait for an hour before parading through the Sambodromo, a mile long stadium designed for this competition. Since you are instructed by the sector leader to just "jump around and have fun", The 80 minute parade goes by quickly, as opposed to the lifetime lasting memories.

THE SAMBODROMO

Should you not want to parade, but just watch the show, you have two options: the bleachers or the sky boxes.

THE BLEACHERS

This is where the masses go, despite the R$300 to R$900 price tag on the tickets. Being a first-timer, you probably won't have the Brazilians' patience to arrive early and wait all day to grab the good seats. Beer is sold by beer-cooler yielding guys, so vou don't have to move around the packed stadium too much. You can get tickets through your receptionist and if prices permit, opt for the 3, 5 or 7th sector, as these offer full views of the parade. The 1st sector is too close to the start to get a good view and the 9th is receded, offering only a partial view of the show.

THE SKY BOXES

The sky boxes are usually bought out by large corporations to schmooze clients. Tickets can range from R$2000 to R$4000 for each day of the show. The views are closer than from the bleachers and the food and drinks more bountiful

WHAT TO DO DAY AND NIGHT:

Street Block Parties:

Rio is sprinkled with 800 big street carnival parties, where bands will play old-time favorites. Ask you concierge for the schedule and locations.

Beach: Ipanema and Copacabana will be packed and this is always the option before you start drinking.

Carnival Balls: Usually expensive, yet well organized costume parties held in hotels or big clubs. The advantage being the controlled environment (no street kids or drunken beligerance).

Samba School Parade at the Sambodromo: As mentioned above, get tickets and watch at least one night of the event.

TIPS FOR THE WORLD

Watching Brazilian Matches

↑ 00 Million Brazilians stop their day to watch a Brazilian soccer game during any World Cup. Those days are national holidays. People leave the streets and head to a soccer game party with their friends, whether at a bar, club or restaurant, or at their homes. The streets become so empty, Will Smith could film the sequel to "I Am Legend" all over Rio without having to clear the streets. It is, in a vibrant way, apocaliptic.

DAYS

WC starts on Thursday 12th of June, finishes on Sunday 13th of July.

Brazilian games:

12th of June: Brazil X Croatia in Sao Paulo

17th of June: Brazil X Mexico in Fortaleza

23rd of June: Brazil X Cameroon in Brasilia and God willing, Brazil plays again on the 28th of June, 4th, 8th and 13th of July.

Where to watch: STADIUMS

If you manage to get tickets to watch any game, be sure to read up on the access routes to the stadium Sometimes whoever sold you the ticket will offer transfer in and out... take it! Access to Maracana stadium (all the stadiums of the WC. in fact) will be sealed off (by a mile radius) to ticket holders, making access by taxi complicated. Maracana stadium has a subway stop near it. It is, however, poor in wifi access and food court options...

BARS

so fill up before going.

Given the emphasis Brazilians put on these events, bars, clubs and restaurants sell tickets a few days ahead, as they know they will pack. Your best bet is to coordinate with your travel mates and buy tickets to a bar near your hotel. Remember: public transport will become difficult before and after the game. Some bars, restaurants and clubs offer an "allinclusive" price where you can drink and eat all you want for, say R$300. This is not expensive, considering you'll be there for at least 6 hours (3 before the game, to warm up, > and 1 after). If Brazil wins, then you'll be there for 9 hours (4 after the game).

> > OTHER

HOST CITIES

If you bought tickets to games around Brazil, then I hope you have a good travel agent, as flights, hotels and transfers will be very hairy during the games.

STREET

You'll notice large screens placed around the beaches and some public squares. Those are very popular places to watch (read: where poor people watch the game). This means that your comfort will be limited to "beer in a can, without being able to go to the can".

CUP IN RIO

Watching Other Matches

Brazilians should be well behaved during "non-Brazil-match-days". So you can watch England X Italy with a lot more calm and less need for planning. The bars and pubs will be almost packed during games involving countries like Argentina, France, Italy, Spain, Holland, England, Germany and Portugal.

2nd only to getting tickets to the games, your best bet would be to contact your country's local consulate and find out where their citizen will be wachting their games. For instance, Palaphita Kitch Lounge (on Lagoa) will be the Swiss "house" during the World Cup, with a Swiss flag waving, and people showing up on time to watch a match and eat cheese.

Dress code

Brazilian game days: Brazil soccer team shirt.

STAYING IN THE LOOP

My buddy David Bailey developed "Spot Night" an app that uses a funky algorhythm to find and list only the hottest parties to the major cities. Not bad, right? Well, it works! Look for it on iTunes! SPOTNIGHT

WWW.LISTAAMIGA.COM AND WWW.WEGOOUT.COM

A website where all of the week's parties are listed by the number of people going. If you want to go, you can register with vour Facebook account and click on "Eu Vou". Your name will automatically appear in the guest list, granting you a small discount.

RIO NIGHTLIFE

The clubs found in this guide are usually frequented by Rio's elite, 20 to 35 year olds. Clubs tend to be for the single crowd, where they go to not be single for that night. Cariocas like to arrive at clubs very late and most start around midnight, some even after 1am (Casa da Matriz,La Paz) This doesn't mean that everyone is at home waiting for the clock to strike twelve. Instead, they pre-party at the nearest botequim to warm up.

There is no alcohol curfew, so bars and clubs close as soon as the house starts to empty. Since Cariocas are sun worshippers and have a beautiful day at the beach to look forward to, most places are empty by 5am.

STREET PARTIES

These are places where different tribes congregate to hang out in the street, obviously with a beer in hand, where you'll probably find a younger college crowd. These are a great option if you want to talk to other Brazilians and the events are easy on your wallet, as there is never any entrance charge and beers aren't marked-up.

LIVE MUSIC

We've listed the places with Brazilian music being performed by local musicians. No international pop or big concerts found here. Although these places offer a great cultural experience, they tend not to attract single people, especially during the week.

CHILLING

These are places where you can sit and enjoy a conversation with your friends over drinks and bar finger-foods. Similarly, some of these are great for couples looking to get away from meatmarkets and wanting a more casual evening.

BAR HOPPING AREAS

With the exception of Lapa and the south side of Leblon, there are very few bar-hopping areas in Rio. If, however, you want to paint the town red and visit several spots in one night, we recommend hiring a guide instead of cabbing back and forth.

Luaus

There are hardly any luaus in Rio, as Cariocas mysteriously tend to stay away from the beach at night (it could be a safety thing or the moisture ruining girls' hair). Your chances of finding one are limited to January and February, when the weather is hot enough.

CONSUMPTION CARD SYSTEM

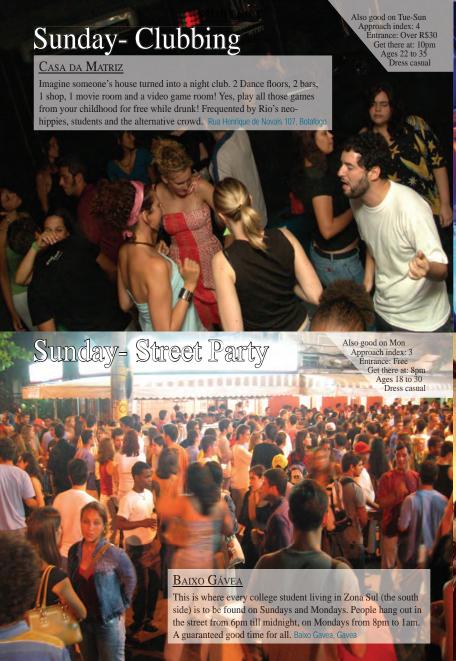

The control card most clubs hand you as you walk in is called a consumption card. The bartender marks on it what you order. Before leaving the place, you go to the cashier and pay for everything you had. This way, you don't have to handle money during your night, nor do you need to tip in excess. They will add 10% as an automatic tip for the waiter. Note: Do not lose the card as they will fine you over R$300 to allow you to leave their establishment if you do.

APPROACH INDEX:

The potential for approaching someone (or being approached by someone) is rated here based on our personal experiences. From 1(mostly couples) to 5 (mostly singles out on the hunt).

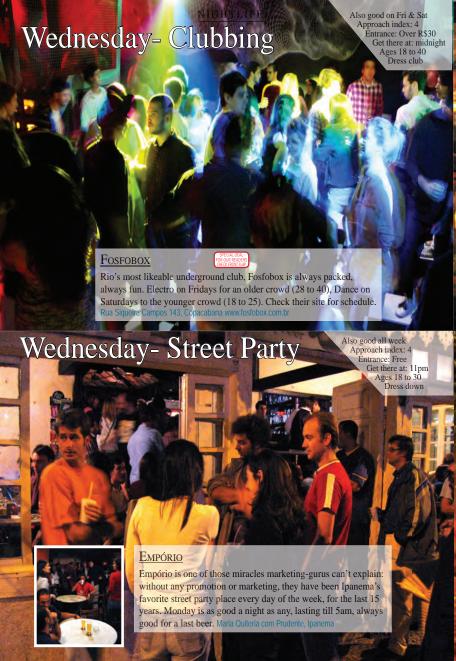

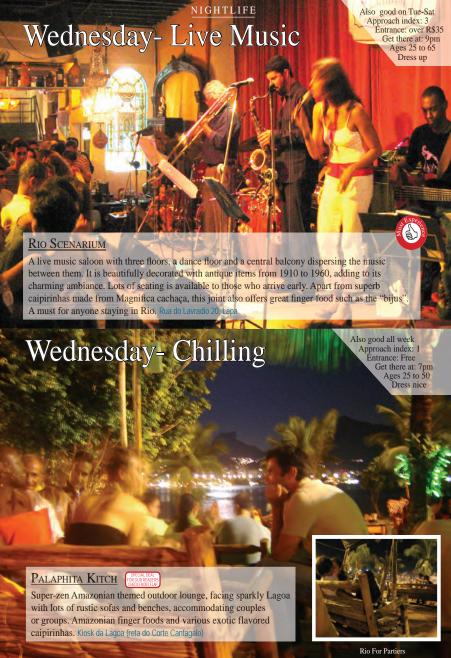

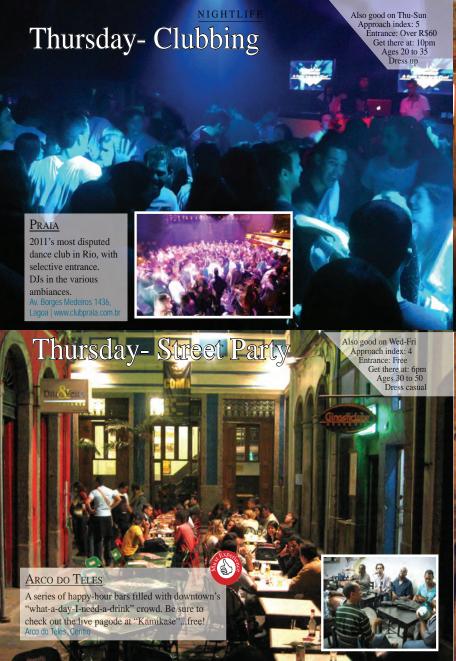

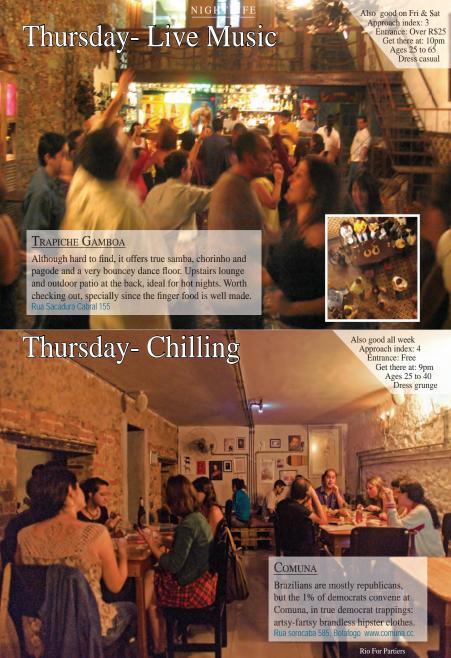

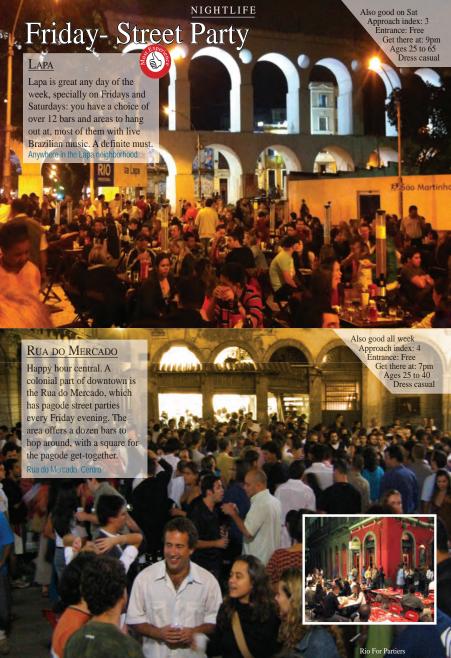

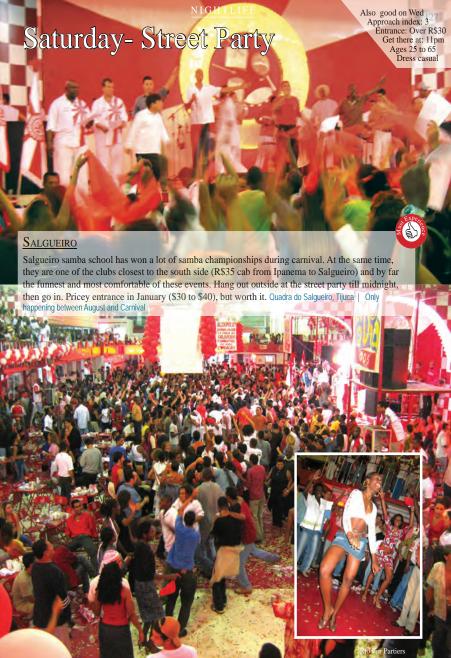

SOUL BABY SOUL

American (not Brazilian) funk parties, usually held in old mansions in Santa Teresa. The house-party feel makes you more comfortable to talk to others and it's easier to make new friends. Line dancing led by a talented mofo by the name of PC Capoeira who gets the place bumping. Check www.listaamiga.com to find out if there is party going on this weekend (usually fridays).

NIGHTLIFE AFTER HOUR FOODS & MOTELS

Motels are not for truckers, but for lovers who rent them by the hour. so the rooms are cheesy-swank, with jacuzzi, ceiling mirrors, sauna and maybe ocean views.

But if you didn't hook up during your night out, you might as well go for a quick snack before crashing. There aren't a whole lot of sitdown breakfast or middle-of-the-night restaurants in Rio, so Cariocas turn to hotdogs or caldo de feijao (black bean soup) to absorb all those caipirinhas. The 4 most recommended spots are:

- Pizzaria Guanabara: very cheesy and doughy slices of pizza, a traditional after-hour hangout. If you didn't hook up and still have the energy, give this joint a try.
- Cervantes: every taxi-driver's favorite. The bartenders are the fastest at assembling a pineapple-steak-and-cheese sandwich: 7 seconds.
- Hot-dog do Humaitá: you can spot the chef's hat from far away and the hotdogs are pretty darn good.
- Lamas: easily the best US$6 steak sandwich (file mignon, mind you) you'll ever taste in the history of the world for ever and ever. True that. Taxi-driver directions are in Portuguese.

GAY

Telcome to Rio, recently voted the most popular gay destination in the world! Apart from the stunning beaches and incredible landscapes, there's far more to catch the eye, starting with the Cariocas themselves - an exotic mix of sensual, passionate and mostly gay-friendly folk who love nothing more than a party.

Being Brazil's main tourist city, you won't just meet locals and foreigners - there's a constant stream of Brazilians on holiday from all over the country and being on holiday means that most are in an adventurous party mood.

GAY RIO BY DAY

The focal point is the gay beach in Ipanema, just in front of Rua Farme de Amoedo, perhaps the gayest street in Rio. Don't worry if you can't speak Portuguese, body-language is universal.

On weekends the beach in front of Copacabana Palace attracts a mature as well as a bear crowd.

There is more to Rio than just beaches, however. There are top attractions like Sugar Loaf Mountain, the Christ statue and the Botanical Gardens and if you're a culture vulture then Rio, as former capital and current hot spot, offers lots of history, architecture and GLBT cultural events, like a film festival, theatre and many fascinating museums.

GAY NIGHT

If it's parties you're after, then you're in for a treat. Every night you can club and party, the only problem is choice. Occasional Circuit Parties such as B.I.T.C.H, R:Evolution, the Original Pool Party and Maxima are all spectacular (get the flyers on the beach) and events like Carnival, Pride and New Year's Eve all attract many dancing queens.

SUNDAY

If it's sunny, it's a beach day, After where better than Rio G Spa to wash the sand out of those tricky places. Just across from the gay beach in Ipanema, this is by far the most popular Sunday post-praia meeting place. You just might bump into the very person you've been admiring all day at the beach. But don't linger for too long, as everyone else has gone for a drink at To Nem Ai on Farme. You can't miss it, it's where the gay crowd bursts out onto the street. You might like to dine later at 00 (Zero Zero) in Gávea - the chiquest club with the hippest crowd. If you want something beefier, the go-gos at Le Boy may be your thing.

MONDAY

A quieter evening in town and a chance to recover from the excesses of the weekend. Fancy a coffee and boy-watching? Head for Cafeina on Farme. For the girls, La Girl is open with a line-up of DJs. Le Boy also opens a smaller part of the club on Mondays.

TUESDAY

Having had a relatively chilled out Monday you are ready to party. One choice is to hang out around Posto 6 bars (Copacabana) and then move on to Le Boy's Strip Night. Here you can dance all night to the latest tunes and watch a show of Rio's best strippers.

WEDNESDAY & THURSDAY

Great days to hang out in Ipanema. Around midnight, leave Farme and walk one block away to Teixeira de Melo, to Galeria. Whether outside or inside, there's always a friendly crowd and tonight it's POParty with VJ LC Ambient. Alternatively, you could try Dama de Ferro for excellent house and alternative tunes. If you prefer Copacabana, try the TV Bar followed by Fosfobox.

GAY

FRIDAY

Friday is the night for Lapa, a very queer-friendly, antique neighborhood with a fabulous atmosphere! Apart from bars such as Sal y Pimenta, you can hang out on the pedestrian street Joaquim Silva, which later becomes a huge street party welcoming all types, making for one of the most fascinating crowds that you will experience during your stay. Not far away is Buraco da Lacraia, always teeming with local low-life glamour. On Fridays the waiters are nude and the entrance fee includes an open bar. To finish the night it's Cine Ideal, a popular club in a former movie

SATURDAY

No trip to Rio would be complete without visiting the recent temple of gay clubbing The Week. As with most clubs, don't think of arriving before 1am. To warm up you could start the night off around Baixo Leblon where lots of trendy bars and restaurants stay open till late

Explore the area around Cazuza Square. Then head off to Galeria which has an excellent party with DJ Dudu Candelot playing groovy house tunes.

If it's summer, don't miss the Unidos de Tijuca Samba School rehearsal, the most gayfriendly and accessible of all the Samba Schools. Saturday's the big night in all the clubs, so take your pick. Just don't forget to make the taxi trip home via the sea front, where the rising sun reminds you that you could be in no other place than Rio.

in flavor and therefore do not need complicated culinary complements. The three most traditional dishes, Feijoada, Bacalhoada and Tutu à Mineira were all colonial foods: rich in carbohydrates, proteins and fat, as all needed to compensate for excessive manual labor. Due to their rich flavors, they were eventually adopted by all social classes.

Bahian food has a flavorful African influence, consisting mostly of sea food, beans, coconut milk and palm oil.

The Churrasco is of Argentinean influence. With the exception of salt, the meats are cooked without spices or sauces, because the chef wants to show his guests that the quality and flavor of the meat does not need to be camouflaged.

Sugar cane cultivation in Brazil has had a strong effect on desserts: most traditional Brazilian desserts being nothing more than fruits blended with tons of sugar. Most of these can be eaten along with cheese.

The contemporary-cuisine chefs in Brazil are making an impressive rediscovery of local ingredients, adding new twists to old recipes, or inventing new dishes altogether and finally out-growing the more traditional French school.

COMIDA A KILO

Food by weight. You pile your plate from the buffet, weigh it and pay proportionally. Prices range from $35 to $70 per kilogram.

LOCAL CUSTOMS

Water does not come free at restaurants, as it does in the US/UK.

Tipping (10%) is supposed to be included at the end of your bill. If you don't see it ("serviço"), add it.

Farofa, cassava flour usually served in bowl, which can be added to your dish and used to dry up whatever sauces are on your plate. Mix it in and eat!

The Churrascaria Experience

Even though Argentineans and Uruguayans may claim it's theirs, the Brazilians have also appropriated the churrasco. much like the falafel belongs to half a dozen middle-eastern countries

Churrasco is a popular Brazilian style barbecue that offers a wide variety of different cuts of beef, pork, lamb, chicken and fish, which are slowly cooked on special grills to preserve all their natural juices and flavors. Churrascarias are restaurants that serve endless rounds of meats on an all-youcan-eat basis, with drinks and desserts served separately. The most sought after meat is the "picanha", aka rump steak, Brazil's favorite cut due to its blend of softness and flavour Ideal for those nights you want to treat yourself to lots of good food.

The modern Brazilian churrascaria steakhouse offers not just grilled meat, but a whole "all you eat" experience involving: cow, chicken, pork, goat, seafood, game, sushi, salads and traditional Brazilian finger food. For drinks they go beyond the beer and caipirinhas, some offering quite an impressive wine list. So, the churrascaria is not only obligatory, but possibly an experience to relive several times during your trip. Hence, the following guide on how best to enjoy a premium churrascaria.

Spoiler alert: there is no trick that will let you eat more than vour stomach can handle.

The Chinese strategy is to go in, eat like there is no tomorrow, as if it were a race and be out of the place in one hour, burping, with your belt starting to rip. You will eat everything they have, in no particular order, as long as it ends up inside you.

The French strategy is the opposite: appreciate different things individually, spaced out and slowly. Kick off with a liquor and accompany the food with wine or caipirinhas. You can indulge in the items on the salad bar followed by the grilled meats or seafood, but not both. because you are not a barbarian. Here you will focus on what you like, not on quantity or value.

The Brazilian strategy is to eat as much value and stay the longest, while ordering nontraditional items. Here you befriend the Maitre D before asking him for the special meats of the day, which may be lamb ribs, extra large shrimp, roast boar, quail, trout, raw tuna or alligator. While he sees what he can do, you visit the salad bar, just to ease your guilt. You limit your carb intake of course, since your goal is to eat expensive foods, a.k.a. rare proteins. After about 3 hours you ask for the cheque.

Tip: Try the cupim (hump steak, not to be confused with rump steak), common amongst the Zebu breed of cows, a soft, fatty and stringy meat cut, popular in Brazil.

True Origins of the Feijoada

Contrary to what most Brazilians will tell you, feijoada wasn't slave food. It was an Iberian recipe introduced to Brazil by the Portuguese, who had the habit of mixing pork meat, veal, lamb, sausages and veggies in a black bean stew.

Sales receipts from upperclass butchers in colonial cities like Rio and Salvador reveal a shopping list of what is essentially a feijoada, discarding the popular notion of the dish being African slave food served on farms. Angolan slaves in Brazil didn't have the habit of mixing meat in their stews.

The bandeirantes, Brazilian colonial pioneers, helped spread the recipe geographically, taking cassava flour, sun-dried meats and black beans, which they planted to guarantee food on their way back east.

Today's variations of feijoada recipes are regional adaptations, such as the brown bean that is preferred in the Northeast, instead of the famous black bean version.

Popular Lunch Dishes

Аьмосо Ехеситічо

(Executive Lunch): A cheaper version of the main dishes on the menu, normally served during lunch. No MBA, suit or tie needed.

GALETO

Grilled game hen, a smaller, juicier cousin of the chicken. Usually served with batata portuguesa (pan fries), garlic bread and vinaigrette.

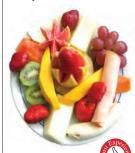

Sanduiche de Filet

Filet mignon on bread.

PF (PRATO FEITO)

Daily dish. Beans, rice, meat (chicken, steak, fish or pork), salad and fries or potatoes: the typical lunch dish eaten by 150 million Brazilians. Coincidentally, it is an incredibly well-balanced diet of carbs, protein, fat and fiber.

Prato de Verão

Tropical Fruit Dish made with various fruits, ham, cheese and maybe a boiled egg.

BAURU

Open steak sandwich with fries, ham, fried egg and salad.

STEAKHOUSE

Churrascaria Palace

The legendary Churrascaria Palace was one of the bossa-nova artists' hang-outs in the 50's. Today it is considered the steakhouse in Rio with the best cost/benefit ratio. Their specialty is picanha, cupim (hump) and lamb ribs. Ask the maitre D' to serve you "tuti", the softest, most succulent part of the rib. Also ask for "picanha borboleta" and the Amazonian fish steaks. They also offer calamari, shrimp, sushi, oysters and salmon, as well as scores of side dishes, anti-pasti and salads. (R$78 for all you care to eat)

MINEIRAN AND BAHIAN FOOD

Brasileirinho Copacabana

The two regions in Brazil that have their own, authentic and traditional cuisine are Minas Gerais and Bahia. The other regions have a limited number of recipes or are heavily influenced by foreign food, such as the German recipes in the south of Brazil. Brasileirinho in Copa is the deluxe version of the Brasileirinho in Ipanema, and their focus is on Bahian and Mineiran food. What to order: the moqueca, the bobo de camarão (cassava stew with prawns), tutu a mineira (the best bet here, refried black beans with pork chops and kale). The view, by itself, is worth the visit! JAPANESE

Sushi Leblon

Japanese food is huge in Rio and Sushi Leblon has been a runaway success for 20 years. Unless you show up before 8pm, you'll have to wait in line however, and no, tables don't free up at midnight... the place boils till 2am! Their success stems from their innovations in sushi and japanese dishes as well as from their hip Leblon address. Note: it is customary for Japanese restaurants in Brazil to over fill your sake box, as a sign of generosity. Be sure to try the strawberry caipisake, to get the night started.

Feijoada

Casa da Feijoada

Casa da Feijoada's specialty is probably the most typical dish from Brazil: a black bean stew with hearty sausages and sun-dried beef, served with rice, collard greens, cassava (manioc) flour and orange slices. This may slow you down on the dance floor. A "must" experience. Feijoada with caipirinha go together like Starsky & Hutch, sticks & clutch. Ask for a caipirinha made with their oak-barrel aged "Vendaval" brand cachaça. (R$79 for all you care to eat feijoada)

EVERYTHING YOU

Alcoholic

(Let's talk about these first)

Cerveja

From an international point of view, all Brazilian beers taste the same: they are all lagers or pilsners, as any other type of beer would not agree with the weather. Given an option, ask for Devassa

Снорр

A light draft beer on tap. Preferred over bottled beer, Ask for Devassa or Brahma.

Caipirinha

The most refreshing alcoholic mixed drink in the world! Cachaca, lime, sugar and ice. Great on any occasion: bar, restaurant, clubbing... breakfast, Just don't buy it from street vendors, as they sometimes use ice made from unfiltered water that can make you sick. Also, try the caipivodka (with vodka) and the caipisake (with sake, duh). Some of the trendier bars offer caipirinhas with different fruits: pineapple, strawberry, tangerine etc. When given a choice of cachaça, opt for the ones from the region of Salinas.

BATIDA DE CÔCO

Very creamy drink that will get you drunk without you knowing. Coconut milk, cachaça, sugar and other stuff blended into a milkshake. Not usually served in real coconuts, except at beach resorts

A SHOT OF PINGA

Cachaça (pr: ca-sha-ssa) Only for the macho. Straight cowboy shot of pinga. You

PINGA COM MEL

Cachaça with honey, mixed to a point where you don't taste the cachaça at all. You can drink it all night and wake up sober. Now that's responsible boozing.

Brazilian WINES

A few Brazilian wines are starting to make it on the international scene, like the Valduga and Miolo winery product line up. Sparkling wine is Brazil's forté. Look for Valduga, Miolo and Salton.

SHOULD DRINK Non Alcoholic

Guaraná

The most popular Brazilian soft drink, great on any occasion.

(Reg. Trademark AmBev SA LTDA)

MATE

A strong-flavored iced tea from the south of Brazil, made from the mate herb. Available in diet or regular and in natural or lemon flavors.

Agua de coco

Coconut water, not milk. Very good for whenever you are dehydrating. Two will cure most hangovers.

AGUA

Since tap water is not drinkable in Brazil, you should always look for bottled water.

SEM GAS= non-carbonated COM GAS= carbonated.

(Reg. Trademark Alimentos e Bebidas Campos do Jordão LTDA)

Cafezinho - Small Coffee

Since the weather is hot, you don't want to walk around with a steaming pint of coffee, so people drink expresso-sized cups of very concentrated coffee, to get the kick without raising your body temp.

Ades Juices

Tasty soy milk juices made from various fruits, found in supermarkets.

(Reg. Trademark Unilever Best Foods Brasil LTDA)

FRUITS AND JUICES

The fastest way to try all the various fruits is to participate in Fruit Brazil's fruit tasting session page 80. Alternatively, any of the juice bars have most of these and others in juice form.

Manga –Mango

Considered by many the one fruit they would take with them to a desert island. Sweet and creamy. Vitamin A and C

Coco - Coconut Water

The best thing when you are dehydrating under the sun. Drink 2 to cure your hangover. Rich in minerals, potassium and sodium.

Guaraná

Sold normally in concetrate juice form (refresco), guaraná could be considered a distant cousin of root beer, but, like every juice in Brazil, a lot sweeter. A stimulant and digestive. And dig this: clinically proven to enhance sexual performance.

PITANGA

phosphorus. A natural stimulant and antidiarrheal.

Fruta do conde -Custard Apple

Ugly on the outside (looks like a grenade), sweet on the inside. Talk about philosophical dualities! Very milky juice. Vitamin C and complex B.

JABUTICABA

A distant cousin of the grape, yet sweeter and thicker. Great in fruit form, specially when frozen.

Amora

MATE

Slightly caffeinated herb used to make iced tea, with a deep rich flavor.

Camú-Camú

Great name, but that's it. Terrible. dirt-like taste. Good for practical jokes. Rich in vit C.

GREAT DESTINATIONS CLOSE TO RIO

There are two ways to extend your vacation in Brazil. One way is to visit the neighboring tourist spots in the state of Rio; the other is to take a plane or bus to other popular tourist destinations. If you intend on coming back on future trips to different parts of Brazil, we highly recommend staying in the state of Rio. It offers a little of everything Brazil is known for, namely parties, beaches, jungle and colonial history. All these spots take under 3 hours to get to, by bus or car.

If you are staying longer than 7 days in Rio, we highly recommend checking out these neighboring areas, as they each offer things that Rio doesn't: Búzios is a party town with great beaches, the Petropolis area is great for mountainous sports, Ilha Grande has the best eco-tourism in the state and Paraty is knee-deep in culture, history and charm.

Paraty & & & & Historic town with beautiful beaches

Eco-tourism heaven

Buzios

The party town of the Southern Hemisphere

Rio de Janeiro

Búzios ©

B úzios is a claw shaped peninsula, with about 27 beaches, making it the St. Tropez of South America, with all the snobbery. Between December and March you can find the trendy 30 somethings there, as well as the young crowd, mostly partiers and surfers.

It has a complete tourist infrastructure that allows you to stay a week without getting bored.

Reservations are recommended for the week around Xmas, New Year and Carnival. Otherwise, finding a place to stay won't be hard, as it accommodates thousands of people during high season. Look for a pousada at Geribá (the coolest beach and where you will be spending your daytime) or downtown, close to "Rua das Pedras" (Centro) where you will be spending your evenings. Other areas will be too out of the way and not worth the savings.

To get to Búzios, take the 1001 bus from Novo Rio Bus Station, which takes 3 hours. Alternatively you can hire a car service for speed and comfort. Once there, you can rent a dune buggy or a car. Other good dates to go are during national holidays, should they land on a weekday, as everyone in Rio takes a sick day and makes it a 4-day weekend. Check: www.buziosonline.com.br

ACTIVITIES:

Surf lessons and body board rentals (Geribá), wind surfing (Manguinhos), wake boarding (Ferradura Beach), jet skiing (Centro Beach)

NIGHTLIFE:

Different clubs and bars along Rua das Pedras.

QUICK DECISION MAKER:

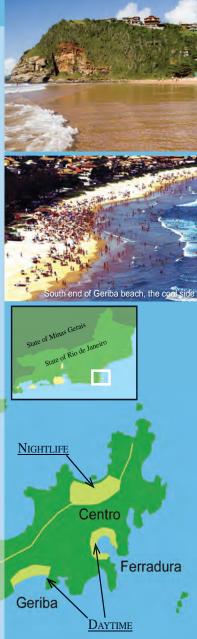

Main activities: Partying, dancing, beach, eating, surfing, windsurfing, jetskiing, snorkelling, etc.

Who usually goes: Singles, couples, groups

When to go: All year round on weekends, all week December to March. How long to stay: 3 to 10 days.

How to get there:

Rent a car from Localiza, type in the GPS "Buzios" and follow the directions. There will be 2 or 3 tolls on the way, so bring cash. Drive time from Rio: 3 hours.

Ilha Grande used to be where they incarcerated Brazil's most violent criminals, until they deactivated the prison, which is now a wildlife preserve. So much so, it can only be explored by walking or sailing. Given its size (hence the name Big Island) you should stay at strategic places like Vila do Abraão, where there are plenty of pousadas, restaurants and a relaxed nightlife. Don't expect big parties, but live music shows and luaus instead. Don't go during New Year or Carnival, as it gets packed and unbearable. More at: www. ilhagrande.com.br

The island offers a lot: diving, surfing, hiking, cycling, rappeling and trekking, as well as eco-tours and tours of the various forts and prisons.

PETRÓPOLIS & ITAIPAVA

Petrópolis and Itaipava are excellent options when the forecast predicts cloudy weather for the next few days. These neighboring towns work off each other: whatever one doesn't have, the other does. Since they are both very close, you should rent a car in Rio, drive up the mountain range (which in itself is a fun drive with endless scary-but-safe curves) and stay at one of the bungalows in Itaipava.

Most of the young bars, clubs and lounges are in Itaipava, while the daytime activities are spread between the 2 cities: rappel, rafting, zip line, canyoning, cycling, trekking, horseback riding, dirt road motorbiking etc. For a cultural experience, visit the Imperial Palace in Petrópolis. These 2 cities can be toured in under 3 days.

PARATY

One of the cutest and most historic cities along Brazil's coast. Founded in the 16th Century, it still has colonial architecture in the downtown area. Not the best place if you are single, but definitely a great option for couples or families. Stay at one of the pousadas on the beaches just east of downtown, where the rates are affordable, (R$180/double) but still close to the action.

There are great dining options in Paraty, all found in the historic center. For nightlife, you are limited to a few live music bars, but you could have a luau for you and your friends at any of the beaches, since Paraty is pretty safe.

Daytime activities include: rafting, rappel, boat trips, surfing, fishing, off-road cycling, etc.

For cultural, do the "Gold Trail" tour, which takes you along part of the road where gold was transported in colonial times. Then go to Fazenda Moycana, a sugar cane farm from 200 years ago. It is well preserved, with water falls, freerange peacocks and hearty Brazilian food.

Luxury & Honeymoon

We have laid out two honeymoon/luxury getaway plans: the more affordable "Around Rio" trip and the more diverse "Around Brazil" plan.

razil's romantic spots can o head to head with most honeymoon getaways found in the rest of the world: its beauty is on par with the best, its excitement real and authentic

Around Rio

Quick breakdown: 3 days in Buzios, 3 in Rio, 3 in Angra.

After landing in Rio, dart over to Buzios, opting for a dreamlike resort such as Casas Brancas. There you can visit the 27 beaches during the day, speed around in a boat, fine dine and sip bubbly all night.

Then hop over to Rio, which, as you have been reading, is just amazing and 3 days are a must. You can stay in a 5 star hotel like the Caesar Park and visit the popular attractions, while dancing to samba and romantic bossa nova after dinner.

Swing over to Angra and lodge in the luxury Pestana beach bungalow. There you can visit any of the 365 islands, snorkel, dive, or sit on the beach waiting for the priceless sunset to enhance the honeymoon mood.

From researching a few travel agencies, this package usually starts around US$7500 per couple.

AROUND BRAZIL

Conversely, if you have more money to spend and want to explore more of Brazil, you can jet around for 11 days to Brazil's top resorts. Here is a shortlist of my top 10 romantic getaways (however, it is my opinion that any of these could be number one).

Top Ten Honeymoon Resorts

- 1. Txai. Itacare
- Nannai. Porto de Galinhas
- 3. Maravilha, Fernando de Noronha

- 4. Ponto Dos Ganchos, Floripa
- 5 Casas Brancas Buzios
- 6. Estrela D'Agua, Trancoso
- 7. Pestana, Angra Dos Reis
- 8. Santa Teresa Hotel, Rio
- Sitio do Lobo, Angra dos Reis

What's cool about these resorts is that they can offer a true "get away from the problems of the world" type holiday, given their seclusion from big cities.

The most positive feedback from honeymooners is their experience of the exotic beaches of the northeast, such as the Txai in Itacare, the Nannai in Porto de Galinhas or Pousada Maravilha on the island of Fernando de Noronha. Mix it up by heading down to Rio and finish with a few days either sailing in Angra or dancing the night away in upbeat sophisticated Buzios.

10. Etnia, Trancoso

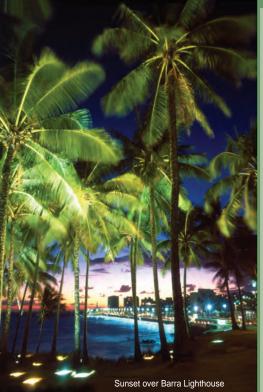

For couples interested in a more cultural experience, then you could swap Rio for Salvador and immerse yourselves in the Black Heart of Brazil, a truly tantalizing experience for all the senses.

Brazil at a Glance

If you plan to visit other parts of Brazil, your first stop should be Salvador, which overflows with Afro-Brazilian culture, music, costumes, food and mellowness. Another option during the summer is to hop over to Natal, then to Pipa and its neighboring towns. This is surfer & babes paradise. Fernando de Noronha has some of the most beautiful beaches in the world, as well as an incredibly well preserved sealife; ideal for divers. Porto Seguro is among the best party towns in the southern hemisphere. If you want to see jungle, vistors have been having more rewarding experiences in the Pantanal than the Amazon. You get closer to the animals, you see more and you have more activities to partake in.

SALVADOR

If Rio is Brazil's face, Salvador is Brazil's heart. You arrive and you notice something in the air that makes you want to move to a new rhythm. Salvador is probably the most culturally rich city in Brazil, offering a wide spectrum of music, food, dance, art and architecture. Everyone seems willing to leave work and party if someone starts playing a little guitar a block away. Lots of foreigners arrived and never left, opening bed and breakfasts as their reason to stay. Salvador maintains its roots, while embracing what works.

Salvador deserves at least 7 days, as it is surrounded by enchanting places like Morro de Sao Paulo, a party island 2 hours south, Praia do Forte, a fishing village turned beach getaway one hour north and Cachoeira, a historic town one hour west.

To skip Salvador is to miss a place where your heart beats faster.

QUICK DECISION MAKER

Main activities: Partying, dancing, singing, beach, eating, sailing, drinking etc.

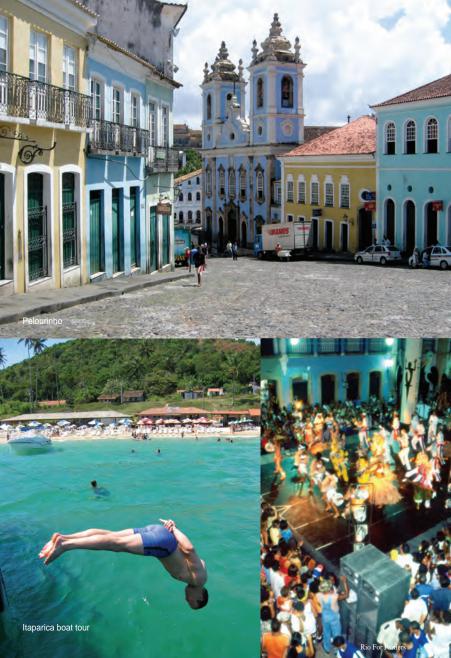

Who usually goes: Singles, couples, groups

When to go: Year round.

How long to stay: 4 to 10 days.

PANTANAL

The Pantanal, portuguese for "wet-lands", is an amazing part of Brazil most of the world has never heard of. Sure, the Amazon is great, but most who visit both, prefer the Pantanal. Why? You get closer to Brazilian animals, such as anteaters, capivaras, large birds and various freshwater fish. This is not a party destination, but a beer is a finger-lift away from the fishing rod on your boat. At night, bonfire warmed up by caipirinhas or, heck, just straight cachaça, so macho you'll grow extra hair on your chest. Look to stay in Fazenda Baia Grande or Fazenda São Francisco, both of which have their own ecological preservation area, so the wildlife is right outside your door.

QUICK DECISION MAKER

Main activities: Wildlife exploring, animal photo-hunting (you get that close), fishing, horseback riding and trekking. Be sure to hop over to Bonito (next page)

Who usually goes: Couples, groups

When to go: April to November weekdays.

How long to stay: 3 to 4 days

BONITO

Bonito is right next door to Pantanal, but it has nothing to do with it. Pantanal is about South American wildlife in the wetlands. By contrast, Bonito is a place where 7 different really cool attractions came together within a 30 mile radius:

- 1) Two mineral water rivers, with amazing underwater visibility, warm temperatures and a rapid flow. One can float down it for an hour, checking out the fish.
- 2) A cave with a crystal blue pool that glows whenever the sun beams down on it (one month a year)
- 3) A 600 feet waterfall with a gorilla's face underneath it.
- 4) A huge circular canyon with hundreds of red parrots nesting in its walls.
- 5) A rafting river with whitewater rapids.

To absorb it all you'll need at least 3 whole days there. Be aware that getting there via the city of Campo Grande in Mato Grosso do Sul takes almost a whole day, so make sure your schedule can accommodate at least 5 days. For lodging, consider the Wetiga hotel in downtown Bonito, or any of the "fazenda hotel" farm lodgings around the city. Nightlife is very limited, so you'll really make the most of your daytime activities. For food, ask for the pintado or pacucaranha fish.

QUICK DECISION MAKER

Main activities: Crystal clear river scuba diving, jungle exploring, animal photo-hunting (you get that close), fishing and trekking. Be sure to hop over to Pantanal (previous page)

Who usually goes: Couples, groups

When to go: All year round

How long to stay: 3 to 4 days

NATAL

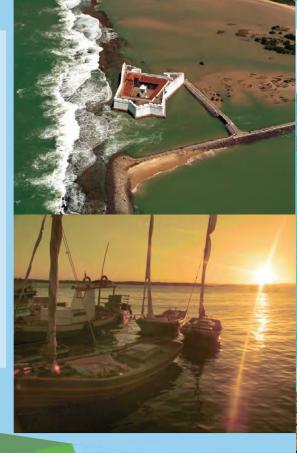

Mix all-year-round warm weather, crystal clear coral reefs, sand dunes, beaches, history and an active nightlife and you get Natal, on the Northeast corner of Brazil. Two hours south are Pipa and Ponta Negra, two charming beach villages preferred by young Scandinavians and Brazilians alike. Zen atmosphere during the day with naturesque bars and restaurants at night.

Manaus

AMAZON

In the heart of the Amazon rainforest lies the city of Manaus, located at the junction of the two main arteries that form the Amazon river. The Amazon is one of those places that makes humans seem small; huge trees and rivers so wide that you can't see the other bank.

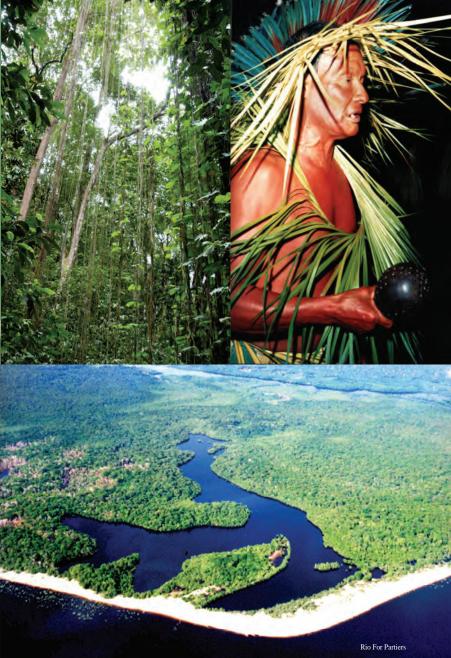

Since the city offers little to the tourist, your best bet is to head for one of the jungle lodges, such as the Ariau Jungle Lodge, the first of its kind, offering tree-top hotel rooms in a forest by Rio Negro. For activities you can do several types of jungle exploring and photo-hunting, tree-top cabling or riverboat fishing.

QUICK DECISION MAKER

Main activities: Jungle exploring Who usually goes: Groups, couples When to go: All year round. How long to stay: 3 to 5 days

AMAZONAS

Foz do Iguassu

One of the world's most impressive spectacles of nature is the Iguassu Falls, a series of 300ft waterfalls 20 miles wide.

The town itself also serves the tourists, with lots of fine restaurants, bars and clubs. The average stay is 3 days, which is enough to cover the main attractions: several falls, the power dam, rafting, rapid-canoeing (not down the main falls, of course) and a jungle tour.

QUICK DECISION MAKER

Main activities: Waterfall sightseeing, trekking, rafting and canoeing

Brazilian Sayings

IDIOMATIC EXPRESSIONS

"Pirate's parrot": a very unimportant person who is always standing behind a VIP in photos.

"Parachuted in": someone who was not meant to be at an event or party, but somehow showed up. Slightly more welcome than a party crasher.

"Handleless suitcase" or "suitcase": someone who is a pain to drag around. "So and so is such a suitcase!"

"Get your horse out of the rain": it's not going to happen, so don't get your hopes up.

"Washing his horse": someone who made it or is well off (not witty, but creates a funny visual). "So and so is washing his horse with his new pizzeria."

"Doesn't stink nor smell": someone or something you feel indifferent about "so and so doesn't stink or smell to me..."

"Older than walking forward": the oldest thing in the world: walking forward. "That joke is older than walking forward..."

"Wash it and its new":

something related to private body-parts. "He just got out of a long-term relationship, but, you know, wash it and its new!"

"Pee outside the potty": a slip up; if you make a mistake. "Da boss said that if he pees outside da potty again, I should whack him..."

"If you don't risk, you can't taste": the value of trying.

"See a square sun rise": to get put in prison.

"Those in a hurry eat raw": perfectionism vs speed.

PORTUGUESE WORDS

Saudade: a bittersweet yearning, lightly enjoyed while missing someone. "I feel saudade, pumpkin..."

Cafuné: The tender running of one's fingers through the hair of one's mate

Corno: a man who got cheated on by his woman. Interestingly, there is no feminine version for this term.

FUNNY SAYINGS

More lost than a deaf person at bingo.

More lost than an orphan on parent's day.

Uglier than beating up your own mother

If it's free, even an injection on the forehead.

If it's free, even a bus in the wrong direction.

Old pans make better food: defense used for an older lover

Example:

The author, who is not a corno. parachuted in to Will Smith's premiere party and posed as a pirate 's parrot. Will Smith thinking "what a suitcase this guy is..."

EXPORT Brazilian Ideas

SAIDEIRA

The "leaving" beer. The beer the group orders once they have decided to leave the bar. Sort of like the "one for the road", yet drunk on the premises.

EXPULSADEIRA

The "expelling" beer. If the bar owner wants to close and you don't want to leave (normal), then he should give you the expulsadeira for free, to compensate for kicking you out.

Comida-a-kilo

Food by the weight. You add it to your plate and you pay on weight. Extremely fair. Why hasn't it gone international yet?

CONSUMPTION CARD

You drink all night and the bar tenders jot it down on your consumption card. Before leaving the bar, you have to settle your bill. If you claim you lost it, you pay a costly fine.

BUTT-SPLITTING JEANS

They ride up women's butts. Women look sexier, men give them all the attention. What could be fairer?

11pm Common-sense traffic lights.

It's late. No other cars at the intersection. Why wait for the light to go green? Duh!

Frescobol

A paddle & ball sport with no winners, yet everyone wins by having fun. Just don't let the ball fall.

RODA DE SAMBA

Samba circle. An interactive method of enjoying music, where instead of listening to a band play, you sing along with them, in an informal setting, allowing for group participation and beer drinking by all involved

ETHANOL-FUELED CARS

Cheaper, cleaner, powerful, sustainable, recyclable, regrowable and can enrich 3rd world countries. Sounds like the solution to this century's problems, doesn't it?

Trio Eletrico

A semi-truck packed with speakers, enough to rock 10 thousand parties, found in small towns where they don't have a structured venue to hold a crowd. The artists sing from the roof of the truck.

GRITO DE CARNAVAL

Carnival shout. A pre-party, 2 weeks before the big event of the season, used to build on everyone's anticipation and excitement.

RESSACA DE CARNAVAL

Carnival hangover. The same as above, but after carnival.

CESTA BASICA

A big bag with a mix of basic foods that'll last a family of 4 for a month. Usually given out to impoverished areas, to low-income employees or used to buy votes.

IMPEACHMENT

Has your president been distributing Cesta Basicas to buy votes? Impeach him/her! Not a Brazilian concept (French really), but Brazilians put it into practice for the first and only time

Doing Business

If you can't stop thinking of business ideas even when on vacation, you may want to check out some of these sites and take these guidelines into consideration.

"Brazil is not for beginners"

Vinicius de Moraes

Before you start doing business in Brazil, you should definitely find a good lawyer. Brazilian law can be pretty complex, specially if you come from a Common Law country. Look for lawyers with an international background, who speak fluent English, would be able to draft documents in both Portuguese and English and explain to you hurdles of Brazilian Law

Patience: In Brazil things generally take longer to be accomplished. Even though many Brazilians have international experience in Europe and the US, very often they do not have the same sense of urgency you will be used to. When setting time frames and deadlines for decisions, be sure to build in lots of additional flexibility.

Immigration: there are Several types of visa that can be used to immigrate to Brazil... from investor visas (currently set at a minimum of R$150,000) to administrator visas, visas related to employment agreements, and other kinds of visas, depending on your country of origin, based on the principle of reciprocity . Do not try to cheat Brazilian Authorities with fake marriages and other types of scams. The Brazilian Federal Police has a lot of experience in dealing with these types of scams. Moreover, you may find yourself in trouble at Brazilian family courts!

Don't assume all Brazilians have the same work ethic. Brazil is larger than Europe and each of the 26 states will demand a slightly different approach. As a general rule, the southern states of Rio Grande do Sul, Paraná, Santa Caterina and Sao Paulo operate on similar standards to the USA and Europe. The Carioca business person from Rio de Janeiro, however, is an entirely different negotiator. A positive assessment would say he is a very friendly, warm, creative and witty entrepreneur with a fertile imagination, an almost theatrical ability in verbal communication and a highly developed intuitive vision for making money. A negative assessment would state that punctuality and calling you back is not a strength. Given these two assessments, the main piece of advice is BE PATIENT!

5 Brazilian labor and tax laws. Upon incorporation or investment in a Brazilian company, be sure to be well informed on Brazilian labor laws. Payroll-related taxes can double your costs with salaries and be extremely burdensome.

Also, make sure to consult a specialist in tax planning and to find a trustworthy accountant before opening your business.

Bureaucracy: One of the Omost frustrating aspects of doing business in Brazil. Be prepared to wait in line for long periods of time at government and administrative offices, banks and other services. Bring a book to read ☐ Incorporating in Brazil: Brazil is not Delaware and vou may not be able to create a company as quickly as you are used to back home, but you may create a company in Brazil in about one month if you have the necessary documents. These may vary depending on who the partners of the company will be or on the purpose of the company, but they will most likely have to be notarized and go through the Brazilian Consulate in your country of origin before they have validity in Brazil. Make sure to follow all steps for the legalization of documents in your country of origin and you may have a speedy incorporation here! The 2 most common corporate types are Limitadas and Sociedades Anônimas. Limitadas are usually cheaper to maintain, but a Brazilian lawyer will be able to tell you which one is the best type for your specific case.

IN BRAZIL

Bank accounts: you will not be able to open a bank account unless you have a valid passport, a CPF and a 12-month residence permit. The CPF and residence permit must be applied for at the Policia Federal and the latter can take months to be processed.

DLearn some basic Portuguese: it may seem obvious, but even if you make a lot of mistakes, your efforts will be greatly appreciated and progress will be quicker.

1 Orrust is extremely important when closing a deal; be prepared to conduct several meetings before a final decision is made. Also, always go for the top decision-makers: Brazil is big on the hierarchical structures and if the top guy wants something he will override all others.

Moving to Brazil

Many foreigners have moved to Rio: half to work, half to retire. The attraction is, as Dan Babush puts it, "As soon as you arrive you are instantly 3 times richer, 3 inches taller and 3 times more relaxed than back home".

Rio is ideal for those who can web-commute: its time zone is 1 to 4 hours ahead of the US, allowing you to wake up late. Those who come looking for work invariably end up teaching English, as the job market is tight and underpaid.

What many foreigners do is spend 6 months at home, getting paid and saving, then come to Rio and live it up for 6 months.

To get an idea: rent in Ipanema/ Leblon goes for at least R$5000 (2bdr), groceries, cellular phone, transport (taxi) and maid another R$2000. Then nightlife, getaways, shopping and flights back home are up to you.

Real Estate: it is extremely important to consult a Brazilian lawyer before buying any real estate in Brazil. Proper due diligence has to be performed in order to find out whether there are any outstanding taxes, liens or encumbrances in the property. Several clearance certificates (certidões negativas) need to be issued by the authorities, attesting that it is safe to purchase such property. In addition, a thorough investigation needs to be done on the seller in order to find out whether there are any pending lawsuits that might jeopardize the title of the property.

How to throw a Brazilian party

Ingredients:

- 1) 3 scandalous Brazilians
- 2) 2 popozudas
- 3) cachaca, limes and sugar
- 4) good, undiced cuts of meat (not hamburger or hot dogs) and a grill
- 5) One CD of: Samba, Funk, Jorge Benjor or Seu Jorge
- 6) Garden with pool
- 7) Slideshow of your photos

STEPS:

- 1) invite everyone and tell them everyone else is going.
- 2) Cover the meats with rock salt and let them sit for 1 hour on the grill
- 3) Dice up limes or pineapple, leave in a bowl for each to make their own caipirinha
- 4) Blast some Jorge Benjor or

Seu Jorge, then move to Samba. When people get drunk, change to funk. You will be able to tell they are drunk when the women start teaching each other how to dance funk.

- 5) Check the meat, if it is cooked, slice off some thin strips and serve them on the cutting board. Don't add barbecue or any sauce. The meat should be judged on its own merit.
- 6) Get a tamborine and eukelete and start singing samba tunes.
- 7) Throw someone in the pool, preferably with their cellphone on them
- 8) Find someone you like and start making out in front of evervone.
- 9) Watch everyone else start making out.
- 10) Post pictures on any social network
- 11) Invite everyone back next week for a moqueca dinner.

How to cook Moqueca

Moqueca is stupid easy and flavor-rich. Ingredients:

- 4 Tomatoes
- 4 Onions
- 2 Bell peppers
- 1 Pound of fresh peeled shrimp 1/2 liter (1 pint) coconut milk
- 1 Can of tomato paste
- 2 Tbl spoons palm oil (optional)
- 6 Garlic cloves

Cilantro leaves for decoration Steamed rice

Step 1: Layer everything in a ceramic pot.

Step 2: Add enough water to almost cover everything

Step 3: Stick it in oven for half an hour, max temp, no lid on pot.

Step 4: Decorate, serve with steamed rice.
